BRITISH ORGANIZING NEW ARMY IN FRANCE

Germans Predict Early Help from Italian Forces

Entrance of Mussolini Into War Believed Only Question of Short Time

Nazi Soldiers Hold Belief France Is Doomed and That Million Frenchmen Are Out of Action

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY ON THE WESTERN FRONT, May 31 (AP)—There is one chief question tonight on German lips along the western front:

"When will Italy plunge into the war to help crush the forces of France?"

German soldiers everywhere expressed belief that France is doomed.

The flower of her troops—including battalions of her best motorized units — are considered hemmed in the Flanders trap to die or surrender. German military spokesmen said nothing comparable to the "doomed" army of the north is left to guard France.

(Allied sources said today "important elements" of the pocketed French force are fighting their way successfully toward channel ports of embarkation on the heels of the British.)

(German military spokesmen said at Berlin that 1,000,000 of France's troops ready for action have been killed, surrendered, or face capture in Flanders, leaving only 3,000,000 ready to stand against fresh German onslaught. Neutral sources estimated the French force at the beginning of the war as high as 8,000,000.)

Casualty Lists Not Given Out by War Office

A SOUTHEAST PORT IN ENGLAND, May 31 — Dead tired, aching for home, the men of the B.E.F. poured on into England tonight, adding chapter after chapter to their epic.

From big liners to tiny boats with only a few men aboard, a great armada brought them home, poured them onto troop trains and went back, under the fire of German guns and bombers, for more.

Tonight the total of the British, French and Belgians brought over the tortured channel ferry routes of war was somewhere near 100,000. But one of them said: "thousands more were massed at the Dunkerque wharves early this morning, waiting for ships."

On the narrow station platforms along the way to London stood the anguished wives and wide-eyed children of the B.E.F., straining at the windows of the rocketing, troop-filled trains.

They were waiting, too, with icy dread, for the casualty lists that have not come.

Heart Attack Ends Life of Well Known Newspaperman

WASHINGTON, Pa., May 31. (AP)—John L. Stewart, 68, owner of three western Pennsylvania newspapers, founder of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Association and hailed by fellow newspapermen as one of the outstanding publishers of the nation, died today.

Death resulted from a heart attack after an illness of ten days. The funeral will be held Sunday (3 p. m. Eastern Standard Time) at the home, with burial in Washington. Thirteen men who have served as president of the publishers association have been asked to represent the organization at the funeral.

Stewart was editor and head of the Observer Publishing Company, which publishes the Washington Observer and the Reporter and owner of the Beaver Falls News-Tribune.

Between 1911 and 1935, he had at various times owned several other newspapers. They included the Washington Daily News, which he merged with the Reporter and Observer; the Beaver Valley News of New Brighton, merged with the Beaver Falls Tribune to form the News-Tribune; and the Beaver Daily Times, Canonsburg Notes and Morgantown, W. Va., Dominion-News which he eventually sold.

Expressions of regret over his death came quickly. Former President Herbert Hoover said in a statement "Mr. Stewart's innumerable friends will deeply grieve his passing. I have valued his friendship, his great patriotism and his sound advice over many years. He represented the very best of American country journalism."

Flanders Victory Hailed with Glee By German Public

ENEMY DESTROYER IS SUNK BY THE GERMANS

Speedy Torpedo Boat Sinks Ship off Coast of Belgium

By LYNN HEINZERLING

Berlin, May 31, (AP)—The bloody triumph in Flanders was hailed in Germany tonight as an overpowering blow against British and French morale, and a jubilant populace speculated on where Hitler will strike next.

The only official hint of the next order was the high command's enigmatic announcement that the bulk of the Nazi legions in Flanders "now are released for new tasks."

The Flanders cleanup, in the Nazi view, entailed only counting the prisoners and evaluation of booty —plus the harrying of the escaping Allies with land guns, mobers and the quick-striking mosquito fleet in the channel.

Allied Destroyer Sunk

During the day the Germans clamed one enemy destroyer was sunk off the Belgian coast by a dashing torpedo boat, which represents the Nazi version of a blitzkrieg-gone-to-sea.

In the German capital, the question on every tongue was where the next blow might fall; whether it would be directed deeper into France in the wake of a new propaganda campaign with obvious Italian implications or against England, the original long-range objective of the German war aims.

Bound up in the question of future activity was the course of axis partner Italy.

It was implied that the answer to Italy's part might come from a conference to which Hitler hastily summoned Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels at western front headquarters.

"Surprise" Move by Italy

In Italian circles, it was said that Premier Mussolini's entry would be a surprise move that would announce itself in due course.

There was no official confirmation of the Italian reports beyond the authorized assertion that Germany was watching her friendly partner "with confidence."

So confident were the Germans of ultimate victory after their smashing three-weeks' conquest of the Netherlands, Belgium and northern France that there was a common tendency to set forth Nazi war aims again.

The authoritative Dienst Aus Deutschland stated that England and France "will be banished in some form to roles of European border areas."

Dienst said that smaller nations would retain "their natural and legitimate living rights" but that there would be no place in the new European picture for England and France.

While the Germans acknowledged that the Allied withdrawals to England from the French channel port of Dunkerque were having some success and that their own losses were heavy, they said the British

Tommies Declare Lack of Planes Caused Defeat

Returning Troops Describe Slaughter in Flanders

ROYAL AIR FORCE IS GIVEN MUCH CREDIT

But More Planes Are Need of the Hour, Experts Assert

By The Associated Press

LONDON, May 31.—England echoed tonight the cry of her returned Tommies: "For God's sake give us more airplanes."

The plea rang through a day which saw 90,000 Allied soldiers snatched safely from the Flanders trap, and all Britain heartened by the assurance she had escaped total disaster in the channel horror.

Although officialdom pronounced the work of the Royal Air force in Flanders "magnificent," the tributes gave additional weight to the clamor for more and better planes of all types.

"When we duck a Nazi bomb," exclaimed an infantryman, "we want to see a British plane chase the bomber."

The sensational plucking of troops from the French shore and transporting them across the channel is being accomplished despite an infestation of spies, incessant bombing, midget torpedo boat activity, and a land assault into which the Germans flung much of their might.

Nazi Losses High

Returning Tommies declared Nazi losses in Flanders were five times as great as those of the Allies.

A naval spokesman declared the loss of a small transport, three destroyers and several auxiliary vessels was trivial compared with the lives saved.

Commenting on the German claim that thve British retreat was a rout, an army spokesman declared that "the hard fact remains that no military operation is so difficult as reembarkation at the end of a retreat."

He pointed uot that despite the inevitable confusion of the retreat, the removal of "large numbers" of British and French troops "still goes on" with the Germans helpless.

LONDON, May 31 (AP)—Planes of the British fleet air arm, attacking German communications along the Belgian coast, were credited by the air ministry tonight with numerout direct hits on troop concentrations, motorized units and "a large open touring car escorted by two motorcycle outriders."

An air ministry communique said the fleet air arm—which is separate from the Royal Air Force—operating with the coastal command directed its attacks on Germans bringing up troops and ammunition trucks along the Nieuport road along the coast.

The communique said:

"Many direct hits on enemy troop concentrations and motorized columns on the Nieuport road, on the Belgian coast, were made by aircraft on the fleet air arm operating with the coastal command Friday afternoon.

"The aircraft were out to attack roads on which Germans were bringing up troops and ammunition trucks.

"They found the roads crowded, approached at 9,000 feet, then split into two formations. Diving to 2,000 feet they made simultantous attacks on two roads. Scores of heavy bombs were dropped. As the smoke of the explosions cleared the pilots saw craters in one road at an important junction. Nearby houses were demolished.

Annenberg To Pay $8,000,000 To Settle Gigantic Income Tax Case

CHICAGO, May 31, (AP)—For a reported $8,000,000 a tentative compromise agreement to settle the financial aspects of all criminal and civil federal income tax cases against M. L. Annenberg, wealthy Philadelphia publisher, was announced today.

United States District Attorney William J. Campbell, declined to disclose the amount involved. From another source at the federal building, however, the figure was placed at $8,000,000.

Annenberg and nineteen other individuals and five companies were named last year in the biggest criminal income tax case on record. Government experts estimated that a lumping of the criminal and civil claims against him as an individual, plus amounts claimed from his manifold corporations, would be around $9,000,000.

Annenberg, whose nationwide news race information service was abandoned last fall after a government investigation, pleaded guilty to one count of one indictment, and is scheduled to be sentenced on that count June 5. It alleged he evaded taxes of $1,217,296 on his 1936 income.

The status of two indictments alleging violation of the lottery laws and another charging him and others with conspiracy to influence a grand jury witness, remained unchanged under the proposed agreement.

Campbell said the agreement which was reached at Washington called for dismissal of ten of Annenberg's associates in criminal income tax cases, including his son, Walter. Five others listed by the prosecutor as "principals" in a conspiracy to defraud case, are scheduled to go on trial June 5.

French Tanks in Action against Nazis on Somme

Motorized Units Supporting New British Expeditionary Force

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

PARIS, May 31 (AP)—French tanks supporting a second British expeditionary force being formed in France pounded at the Germans along the Somme front tonight.

They mopped up the Abbeville sector and reported they had regained unbroken command south of Somme.

While this campaign went on, heavy detachments of Allied troops were declared to be pouring through Dunkerque to the historic channel retreat from Flanders.

The action to the south was mentioned by the French command's night communique only as "a certain activity," and with the secrecy that customarily surrounds the start of major Allied movements.

The Abbeville bridegehead was taken, but the capture of the town itself — lying to the north of the river — was not claimed. It remained in no-man's land. Hundreds of Nazi prisoners and a mass of German war material were declared seized.

French air activity was greatly intensified on both fronts.

Planes Drop Food

In the north, where the rearguard of the men of Flanders was struggling to force a passage through the Germans—who sought to cut them off in the mountains southeast of Dunkerque — French bombers defied anti-aircraft fire and low visibility to drop food and munitions for the isolated forces.

More than twenty tons of bombs were launched by two flights of French bombers in heavy attacks on German concentrations north of the Somme and German anti-aircraft batteries and other objectives near Abbeville.

The tanks were reported to have ridden dough-shod over the German anti-tank nests and to have broken up the last of the Reichswehr's outposts on the south side of the river.

This apparent prelude to large-scale action on a new front—a front protecting Paris—was reported by the war ministry spokesman along with a declaration that the flood waters spouting through locks opened by the French were holding back the German effort to smash Dunkerque, the port of exit for the fleeing northern Allies.

The city was surrounded by flood water standing to average depth of a foot and a half.

Read Guard in Peril

Part of the French rearguard in Flanders was acknowledged, however to be "in difficulties."

These men were moving in retreat in a bloody rectangle which earlier had been reported holding generally firm under the assaults of the greatest mechanized German army ever to take the field.

Two muddy, weary and savagely punished divisions of the command of General Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux — originally totaling about 30,000 men—led the strange march into Dunkerque, the Allied port of exit to the sea.

Roosevelt Asks Another Billion For Defense Fund

Congress Believed Certain To Act Promptly on His Request

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, May 31—To a Congress that gave every sign of responding swiftly, President Roosevelt today sent a request for the "speedy" addition of more than a billion dollars to the national defense fund in view of the "almost incredible events" in Europe.

While no one could forecast the future, he said, America's defenses must be made "more certain" as long as a possibility exists "that not one continent or two continents but all continents may become involved in a world-wide war."

Statements approving better defenses came immediately from members of both parties. Democratic leaders forecast action on the president's request in "double-quick time," while Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, the House minority leader, said "Republicans are united in every effort to improve defenses."

Has Vast Program

The president's recommendations would increase the current arms program to more than $4,300,000,000. Besides laying emphasis on planes and other mechanical equipment, which are playing such a part in the "incredible events," the president outlined a vast program of expanding factories and other military production facilities, and of training "our people, and especially our young people, for employment in industry and in service in the army and navy."

In line with reports that 1,000,000 persons would be thus trained, he told the legislators:

"It is imperative that we make full and effective use of the mighty capacities that lie in our population."

May Call in Guard

In addition, the president requested authority to 'call into active service such portion of the national guard as may be deemed necessary to maintain our position of neutrality and to safeguard the nat-

Liner Roosevelt Reaches Irish Port To Rescue 1,200 Americans

GALWAY, Ireland, May 31. (AP)—The U. S. liner President Roosevelt arrived here late tonight to take more than 1,200 Americans back home and out of the dangers of war.

The ship anchored about two miles off shore to avoid the comparatively shallow water in the harbor. The Americans' luggage, 80 tons of it, was put aboard.

Long beforehand, the prospective passengers had assembled in this sleepy village on the west Irish coast.

As the crowds swelled, to the delight of the townfolk who cancelled the regular Friday half-holliday to sell their wares to the overmonied among the Americans, it became apparent that the refugee ship sent over at the request of President Roosevelt would have to carry more passengers than anticipated.

To meet this bulging response to consular appeals for Americans to go home, the ship had extra accommodations ready and cots in the public rooms.

The Roosevelt was expected to make a quick turn-around.

Extra police precautions were in evidence around the customs pens where the Americans had their luggage examined.

The Galway folk profited enormously and figured their loss of holiday well compensated, the reason being that after the Americans were told they could take no more than $64 out of the country, they pammed into shops to turn extra money into linens and laces and other souvenirs of the auld sod.

New Drive in Somme Sector To Be Backed By French Tank Units

Allies May Be Moving To Head Off Nazi Attempt To Take Paris; More Than 90,000 British, French and Belgian Troops Escape Across the English Channel; Rescue Work Continues

By The Associated Press

A second British expeditionary force, following up the one whose remnants still are fleeing Flanders, was being organized in France last (Friday) night behind the Somme front where French tanks battered away at the southern end of the German salient.

Allied pressure on the Somme front, the French said, had "cleaned up" the Abbeville sector, though capture of Abbeville itself was not claimed.

This new action on the Somme may answer the question: Where will the next move come in the war?

It might mean the Allies were making a move to head off a German drive on Paris. Such a thrust, with the French capital the goal and possibly Italy blasting at France from the south, was forecast in German army circles on the western front.

KEEP FACTS SECRET

The French kept secret the strength and location of the second BEF.

The British air ministry, meantime, reported broad activity of the fleet air arm in harrying German forces driving in to deal a death blow to Allied units withdrawing from the channel pocket around Dunkerque.

Italy's position seemed to have simmered down to the point where diplomats wondered no longer whether she would enter the war but rather when.

It was reported that Italians long resident in Switzerland had been ordered by their government to return home.

Statements of the Hungarian premier and foreign minister made it clear that Hungary's policy was coordinated with the Rome-Berlin axis. This would give German armies a clean sweep through Hungary in any drive into southeastern Europe.

The French said Allied northern armies were being rescued "on a large scale" through Dunkerque.

A war ministry spokesman in Paris said "important" withdrawals which got under way Thursday night still were progressing undiminished, with British, French and Belgian troops pouring across the English channel in an unending stream.

It was acknowledged, however, that the French rearguard protecting the Allied retreat was "in difficulties."

The clean-up of the Abbeville sector, thirty-five miles below Dunkerque, indicated that the French were battling fiercely to regain an important coastal area around that port on the Somme estuary, twelve miles from the channel. This is the western end of France's new main line.

Many Germans Captured

The French spokesman earlier said he could not confirm that the town of Abbeville itself had been recaptured. He asserted hundreds of German prisoners, many weapons and supply trains had been captured, against only a few French killed and one tank destroyed.

Meanwhile, Italy's long-awaited plunge was reported imminent in dispatches from Adolf Hitler's headquarters on the Western front.

Simultaneously, Italian journalists began leaving Paris.

The Nazi fuehrer was reported to be preparing a "sensation" announcement involving Italy, World war ally of Britain and France but now aligned with Germany in a "pact of steel." Hitler had just received a communication described as "of the greatest importance" from his axis partner, Premier Mussolini.

With the battle of Flanders virtually ended, its final chapters were being written in fire and exploding steel as German mechanized columns advanced relentlessly against fierce-fighting French and British rear guards retreating to the "escape" port of Dunkerque.

Many Soldiers in Ports

Tens of thousands of mud-stained, battle-weary British Tommies, French Poilus, and some Belgian soldiers who refused to lay down arms at the command of King Leopold III, arrived at English ports and sped to rest stations in the countryside after running a terrible gauntlet of fire.

Other thousands of Allied troops were massed on the Dunkerque wharves waiting for ships to take them across the channel.

About 90,000 soldier survivors of the disastrous Flanders campaign, including 58,000 British, were re-

Next Move In the War

By The Associated Press

Louis P. Lochner, chief of the Associated Pres bureau in Berlin, reports from the western front that there is talk in army circles that this will be the next move in the European war:

A concentric German attack on Paris—that is, make the French capital the focus of pressure from a curving front—with Italy stabbing in from the south at the same time.

The pivot of this talk seems to be a German conclusion that the French air force no longer is a formidable threat to Italy's industrial region fronting on France.

WASHINGTON, May 31—To a Congress that gave every sign of responding swiftly, President Roosevelt today sent a request for the "speedy" addition of more than a billion dollars to the national defense fund in view of the "almost incredible events" in Europe.

While no one could forecast the future, he said, America's defenses must be made "more certain" as long as a possibility exists "that not one continent or two continents but all continents may become involved in a world-wide war."

Statements approving better defenses came immediately from members of both parties. Democratic leaders forecast action on the president's request in "double-quick time," while Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, the House minority leader, said "Republicans are united in every effort to improve defenses."

Has Vast Program

The president's recommendations would increase the current arms program to more than $4,300,000,000. Besides laying emphasis on planes and other mechanical equipment, which are playing such a part in the "incredible events," the president outlined a vast program of expanding factories and other military production facilities, and of training "our people, and especially our young people, for employment in industry and in service in the army and navy."

In line with reports that 1,000,000 persons would be thus trained, he told the legislators:

"It is imperative that we make full and effective use of the mighty capacities that lie in our population."

May Call in Guard

In addition, the president requested authority to call into active service such portion of the national guard as may be deemed necessary to maintain our position of neutrality and to safeguard the nat-

New Drive in Somme Sector To Be Backed By French Tank Units

Allies May Be Moving To Head Off Nazi Attempt To Take Paris; More Than 90,000 British, French and Belgian Troops Escape Across the English Channel; Rescue Work Continues

By The Associated Press

A second British expeditionary force, following up the one whose remnants still are fleeing Flanders, was being organized in France last (Friday) night behind the Somme front where French tanks battered away at the southern end of the German salient.

Allied pressure on the Somme front, the French said, had "cleaned up" the Abbeville sector, though capture of Abbeville itself was not claimed.

This new action on the Somme may answer the question: Where will the next move come in the war?

It might mean the Allies were making a move to head off a German drive on Paris. Such a thrust, with the French capital the goal and possibly Italy blasting at France from the south, was forecast in German army circles on the western front.

KEEP FACTS SECRET

The French kept secret the strength and location of the second BEF.

The British air ministry, meantime, reported broad activity of the fleet air arm in harrying German forces driving in to deal a death blow to Allied units withdrawing from the channel pocket around Dunkerque.

Italy's position seemed to have simmered down to the point where diplomats wondered no longer whether she would enter the war but rather when.

It was reported that Italians long resident in Switzerland had been ordered by their government to return home.

Statements of the Hungarian premier and foreign minister made it clear that Hungary's policy was coordinated with the Rome-Berlin axis. This would give German armies a clean sweep through Hungary in any drive into southeastern Europe.

The French said Allied northern armies were being rescued "on a large scale" through Dunkerque.

A war ministry spokesman in Paris said "important" withdrawals which got under way Thursday night still were progressing undiminished, with British, French and Belgian troops pouring across the English channel in an unending stream.

It was acknowledged, however, that the French rearguard protecting the Allied retreat was "in difficulties."

The clean-up of the Abbeville sector, thirty-five miles below Dunkerque, indicated that the French were battling fiercely to regain an important coastal area around that port on the Somme estuary, twelve miles from the channel. This is the western end of France's new main line.

Many Germans Captured

The French spokesman earlier said he could not confirm that the town of Abbeville itself had been recaptured. He asserted hundreds of German prisoners, many weapons and supply trains had been captured, against only a few French killed and one tank destroyed.

Meanwhile, Italy's long-awaited plunge was reported imminent in dispatches from Adolf Hitler's headquarters on the Western front.

Simultaneously, Italian journalists began leaving Paris.

The Nazi fuehrer was reported to be preparing a "sensation" announcement involving Italy. World war ally of Britain and France but now aligned with Germany in a "pact of steel." Hitler had just received a communication described as "of the greatest importance" from his axis partner, Premier Mussolini.

With the battle of Flanders virtually ended, its final chapters were being written in fire and exploding steel as German mechanized columns advanced relentlessly against fierce-fighting French and British rear guards retreating to the "escape" port of Dunkerque.

Many Soldiers in Ports

Tens of thousands of mud-stained, battle-weary British Tommies, French Poilus, and some Belgian soldiers who refused to lay down arms at the command of King Leopold III, arrived at English ports and sped to rest stations in the countryside after running a terrible gauntlet of fire.

Other thousands of Allied troops were massed on the Dunkerque wharves waiting for ships to take them across the channel.

About 90,000 soldier survivors of the disastrous Flanders campaign, including 58,000 British, were re-

Next Move In the War

By The Associated Press

Louis P. Lochner, chief of the Associated Pres bureau in Berlin, reports from the western front that there is talk in army circles that this will be the next move in the European war:

A concentric German attack on Paris—that is make the French capital the focus of pressure from a curving front—with Italy stabbing in from the south at the same time.

The pivot of this talk seems to be a German conclusion that the French air force no longer is a formidable threat to Italy's industrial region fronting on France.

Annenberg To Pay $8,000,000 To Settle Gigantic Income Tax Case

CHICAGO, May 31. (AP)—For a reported $8,000,000 a tentative compromise agreement to settle the financial aspects of all criminal and civil federal income tax cases against M. L. Annenberg, wealthy Philadelphia publisher, was announced today.

United States District Attorney William J. Campbell, declined to disclose the amount involved. From another source at the federal building, however, the figure was placed at $8,000,000.

Annenberg and nineteen other individuals and five companies were named last year in the biggest criminal income tax case on record. Government experts estimated that a lumping of the criminal and civil claims against him as an individual, plus amounts claimed from his manifold corporations, would be around $9,000,000.

Annenberg, whose nationwide news race information service was abandoned last fall after a government investigation, pleaded guilty to one count of one indictment, and is scheduled to be sentenced on that count June 5. It alleged he evaded taxes of $1,217,296 on his 1936 income.

The status of two indictments alleging violation of the lottery laws and another charging him and others with conspiracy to influence a grand jury witness, remained unchanged under the proposed agreement.

Campbell said the agreement which was reached at Washington called for dismissal of ten of Annenberg's associates in criminal income tax cases, including his son, Walter. Five others listed by the prosecutor as "principals" in a conspiracy to defraud case, are scheduled to go on trial June 5.

Liner Roosevelt Reaches Irish Port To Rescue 1,200 Americans

GALWAY, Ireland, May 31. (AP)—The U. S. liner President Roosevelt arrived here late tonight to take more than 1,200 Americans back home and out of the dangers of war.

The ship anchored about two miles off shore to avoid the comparatively shallow water in the harbor. The Americans' luggage, 80 tons of it, was put aboard.

Long beforehand, the prospective passengers had assembled in this sleepy village on the west Irish coast.

As the crowds swelled, to the delight of the townsfolk who cancelled the regular Friday half-holiday to sell their wares to the overmonied among the Americans, it became apparent that the refugee ship sent over at the request of President Roosevelt would have to carry more passengers than anticipated.

To meet this bulging response to consular appeals for Americans to go home, the ship had extra accommodations ready and cots in the public rooms.

The Roosevelt was expected to make a quick turn-around.

Extra police precautions were in evidence around the customs pens where the Americans had their luggage examined.

The Galway folk profited enormously and figured their loss of holiday well compensated, the reason being that after the Americans were told they could take no more than $64 out of the country, they pamined into shops to turn extra money into linens and laces and other souvenirs of the ould sod.

Bad weather was given as the cause for the landing. The big flying boats abandoned regular stops here several weeks ago.

New Drive

ported to have landed safely in England.

Two divisions of the French rear guard, once trapped in the German "ring of steel" in the Lille sector, were reported to have knifed through the Nazi lines and reached Dunkerque.

British military observers estimated that Germany's casualties in the twenty-two-day old "real war" in the west approached half a million dead, wounded or missing. No figures were given for Allied losses.

Despite the shock of their ordeal, most of the Allied soldiers passing through London said they wanted "another crack at Jerry", and their main cry was:

"For God's sake, give us more planes!"

Returning Allied troops declared Belgium was honeycombed with spies and that if it hadn't been for their activities the Allies still would be fighting along the Albert canal.

A British announcement said British, French and Belgian troops numbering about half the original British expeditionary force—estimated at around 300,000—had been brought out safely.

May Not Invade England

Fears of a German invasion of England abated somewhat amid a shift in the wind of German propaganda, now turned full blast on France with German radios blaring a new "on to Paris!" instead of the hitherto popular "we are sailing against England."

Generalissimo Maxine Weygand, commander in chief of the Allied armies, waited for any attack behind the Aisne-Somme line extending from the main Maginot line in the east to Abbeville in the west.

Italy's entry into the war—presumably directed at a flank attack against France—would throw into the struggle approximately 5,000,000 first-line combatants, about 8,000 warplanes, and ninety submarines, and a formidable array of bigger warships. Only recently Italy launched two new 35,000-ton battleships described as the most powerful warships afloat.

Any announcement of Italy's plunge probably would come only after the Italian forces already had struck.

An added indication of Italy's imminent entry into the war was the statement in London that Il Duce had broken off Allied negotiations to relax contraband control in the Mediterranean.

In Washington, President Roosevelt told Congress the "speedy" enlargement of the U. S. defense program "by over a billion dollars" was demanded by "the almost incredible events of the past two weeks in Europe.

Presenting his second special defense message in fifteen days, Mr. Roosevelt said, "as long x x x as the possibility of war exists that x x x all continents may become involved in a world wide war, reasonable precaution demands that American defense be made more certain."

His request for more funds pushed the immediate defense program near $4,500,000,000.

"FIFTH COLUMN" SUSPECTS INTERNED IN BRITAIN

Files of armed soldiers escort this great parade of aliens to interment camps in a town in northern England as Britain rounds up thousands of men and women suspected of being in the "Fifth Column." Britain is taking no chances with aliens since German conquest of Norway and the Low Countries was materially assisted by Nazi sympathizers.

Women, Children

a British officer, dead, his own pistol beside him.

From this port even the fishing boats and the trim little holiday motor craft went across the channel today and came back, loaded with men in khaki.

The navy and the air force stayed grimly on guard.

Across the channel the sun gleamed on the white shore line of France and the green fields beyond.

The black plume of smoke from a huge fire, burning near Dunkerque, mounted the sky.

The men who landed told stories of fighting fiercely only a few hours previously.

"It is an inferno over there; a hell made by man," said one artilleryman.

"The Germans asked for a truce to bury their dead after a 36-hour barrage had help up their advance.

"We replied: 'There's no truce.' And we gave them another seven hours of barrage."

British Heavily Shelled

Another soldier said the Germans shelled the British on the Dunkerque wharves with long-range guns.

"There were some killed," he added.

Every sort of a story was told of the new German strategy of war. Here was one, told by a Tommy:

"We found ten thousand almost perfect, counterfeit, ten-franc notes on one plane that we brought down. Parachute troops are being given this money to disorganize French finances."

Another Tommy told what happened to parachute troops in Flanders:

"I have seen German corpses landing with as many as fifty bullets in them," he said. "They were killed long before they reached the ground."

Through the lush green countryside of England, idyllic in the first flush of summer, sped train after train of mud-stained men.

At the wayside stations they were deluged with fruit, cigarettes, tea, cookies.

Child Greets Brother

On one platform, a six-year old girl sprang into the arms of a grimy soldier. It was her brother, unheard-from for six wekes.

One soldier held a bottle of beer to the lips of a sailor who had both arms swathed with bandages.

Many of the men limped until they saw a sympathetic eye upon them; then they straightened fiercely.

Padres straight from the front and women of the auxiliary territorial services came back with the fighters.

One white-haired vicar praised the discipline of the men on the bomb-blasted beaches across the Echannel. There, he said, they hid in the dunes until rescue came.

The women of the "ats," like the soldiers, showed the strain of sleepless nights under constant fire, air-raids and lack of sleep.

One story of these air-raids and what they do to a man came from a British officer:

"I had six hours sleep in 72, and when the bombing was at its worst, I spent hours lying in ditches, with by teeth clenched and my fingers wedged in my ears, my face buried in the weeds.

"During the last four days we marched miles under incessant bombing and finished up with a ten mile trek along a rough beach before we got to the boats."

Most of the men coming back were in their early twenties, but there were a few be-medalled war veterans, morose and silent.

With them, too, were the French and the Belgians—those men of Leopold who wouldn't stop fighting when he told them to stop.

In the railway stations, the English officers and men, most of them unable to speak French, passed over hard-boiled eggs, sandwiches, and cans of steaming tea to bearded poilus and to chocolate-hued Senegalese with the crescent emblazoned on their turbans or wearing stained, scarlet tarboosches.

Bring Down Two Planes

One officer who fought through the lowlands campaign told how his soldiers salvaged a machine gun and ammunition from a German bomber shot down by the RAF and used the gun to bring down two other German planes.

The gun was mounted on a motorcycle sidecar and taken along on the retreat to the sea.

"Two days later," the officer related, "we were bombed at dawn by a Heinkel (German bomber). We had with us a trooper who was an expert shot. Using the German machine gun he brought the Heinkel down x x x.

"When we were about to embark, the enemy had been bombing the quayside trying to get our small boat. Just at dusk the last German plane brought down one of our fighters. The British pilot jumped with his parachute and x x x when the German plane circled low over the sheds where we were sheltered, we got in a burst of machine gun fire that brought him down as well."

An infantryman, Private George Turner, exclaimed:

"We are going to win this bloody war!"

Turner had been asked what he thought of the course to date.

An artilleryman said, "as long as it ends soon, we are satisfied."

Robert Atlee, an infantryman said of the reembarkation:

"Our navy—it was wonderful."

up in France before trying the blow across the English channel at Britain.

Italy May Enter

Such a plan premeditates concentric attack on Paris, with Germany's axis partner, Italy, thrust in from the south.

The talk among the troops last week that Hitler would unleash his armies against England from newly-won coastline bases has switched to a belief that England will be kept "in a state of jitters" by long-range artillery fire across the channel and sporadic raids by dread dive-bombing Stukas until operations in France are cleaned up.

Word was received that an important communication from Premier Mussolini had reached Hitler's military headquarters. No details were disclosed. (It was announced in Berlin that Hitler had received the Italian ambassador, Dino Alfieri, at his western front headquarters.)

Views Desolate Scenes

My trip back to the battlefront (Lochner was with the German armies in Belgium last week) was through fields pock-marked with shell craters and little towns where fire finished what powder did not destroy.

A 65-mile-wide graveyard of shell-torn tanks between Sedan and Maubeuge told a story of destruction by dive bombers and armor-piercing ammunition.

It was along this stretch of Belgian-French frontier that Germany punched through French defenses two weeks ago with the feint toward Paris that veered into a death-trap salient to the sea.

There was every indication that the French were taken by surprise, although one reliable source told me the French had advance word of the plan to drive a wedge at Sedan.

It was suggested that the French high command either disregarded this—firm in the belief the 1914 strategy of a barn-doorswing down through Belgium would be followed again—or did not expect a drive in such force.

Fighting Is Terrific

The wreckage of the once-quiet country-side shows the fighting in the gap was terrific. Sedan has sagged into pathetic ruin. Maubeuge was badly bombed and shelled. Little towns were nearly wiped away.

Everywhere is the twisted wreckage of tanks. Some are upside down. Others are telescoped in heaps as if hurled against each other with terrific fury. Some plunged through the walls of houses, then were buried by the collapse of the walls and roof. Bullet holes penetrated armor several inches thick. Many were blasted to pieces by bombs.

To questions of how many tanks participated in the bitter attack and counter attack the reply is usually:

"A huge number."

Speedboat Fleet Active

However, it was reported here that the German speedboat fleet was proving troublesome with its torpedoes launched at British warships and that German troops pressed to within six miles of Dunkerque and were apparently laying down a deadly barrage on what is left of the harbor city.

North and south of Lille, French units continued to resist the German "rub-out" process but their fate was regarded here as sealed. Another small Allied force separated from the main battleground in the north near Cassel.

The Berlin newspaper Lokal Anzeiger, in its description of the scene at Dunkerque, said: "The remaining British force is seeking with every possible means — in small boats or even by swimming—to reach ships which are under protection of night and fog while attempting to save soldiers who can be saved, for England needs every single man now."

The press campaign against French "brutality" reached a new height of fury. This developed the feeling that Germans would be driving toward Paris before another week was out.

The "Engelland song" has been supplanted on Nazi lips by the new war song dinned day and night:

"We are marching victoriously far into France—"

Tommies Declare

tled up Allied army remained Britain's greatest concern, informed London observers said they looked for an early attempt by Adolf Hitler to divide England and France with separate offers. These factors were mentioned:

Hitler's Probable Plans

1. Threat would be made of Italian entry into the war to induce acceptance.

2. The French would be threatened with a smashing assault by land and air against Paris.

3. The British would be asked to accept Hitler's terms or face "total war," presumably meaning invasion.

There was no indication anywhere that the British or French would heed separate peace proposals.

Meanwhile the day's developments included the statement from a competent source that Italy had intimated she considered British-Italian negotiations on contraband control as broken off. This came in spite of an agreement on principle last week that an easing of contraband control over Italian ships might be worked out satisfactorily.

The nation, while calling for more planes to turn the tide of war, steeled itself for the expected casualty list from Flanders.

Fight All the Way

"Bloody, bitter fighting all the way," one soldier called it. He came home on one of the seven ships which reached the same port within two hours today.

The men carried all the equipment they could salvage. "We left the heavy stuff behind," one said.

The bombing at Dunkerque, an officer declared, is "terrific," but "the loss of life small."

Those who endured the "blizzard" of bombs and got safely across the channel expressed feelings of sheer luck.

Women and men wept as they welcomed the returning soldiers. Boys who left for Flanders with song on their lips came back powder-burned, tattered, hungry and too exhausted to speak.

British Officer a Suicide

One British officer shot himself in a troop train on the way to London — unable apparently to endure the contrast of security which at last had come to him.

Whether the next great assault will be on England or Paris was regarded as merely a matter of timing. The people expect both sooner or later.

Reliable sources said about two-thirds of the 90,000 troops returned to England are British, of which there were originally 175,000 in Flanders. The other troops brought here are Belgian and French.

No casualty figures have been made public for the Allies. The Nazi losses in Flanders, by Allied estimates, total about 500,000 men.

The "fifth column" drive was pushed with ever greater intensity because of the revelations by returning officers about the spy infestation in north France and Belgium.

"It seemed," declared one, "that if army headquarters moved into a house — even if one of a row — it could be guaranteed that that house would be bombed."

While England welcomed its Flanders survivors it became generally known that with the withdrawal of northern troops, more and more British expeditionary force soldiers are going into another action in France below the Somme river.

French Tanks

clared by the Germans to be their captive.)

They moved through the center of a great box of men and steel, its four walls formed of roaring tanks like the locked shields that once protected the legions of Caesar.

The Allied corridor of escape stretched from near Lille to Dunkerque.

In a last effort to annihilate the already defeated Allied armies, the Nazis threw into the struggle ten armored divisions and three motorized divisions—virtually their entire mechanized strength—in addition to numerous infantry divisions.

Allies Embarking

They smashed with all their might at Dunkerque, but the French spokesman acknowledged that while little was left of the docks and quays "considerable quantities" of Allied troops were embarking regularly in small boats from which they were being transferred at sea to larger craft.

Off the coast, the British and French fleets laid down a curtain of fire around these men.

While this great northern drama was nearing its close, Italian journalists were leaving Paris today. A ministry of information official said that while this did not mean "inevitable" war with Italy it was possible that the Italians would enter within a few days.

The French military spokesman said that now that Flanders was virtually out of the way of the central French armies massed in the region of the Somme were ready now for "second round"—the first having been the great actions in the Meuse valley and in Flanders which ended in German victories.

New Drive

ported to have landed safely in England.

Two divisions of the French rear guard, once trapped in the German "ring of steel" in the Lille sector, were reported to have knifed through the Nazi lines and reached Dunkerque.

British military observers estimated that Germany's casualties in the twenty-two-day old "real war" in the west approached half a million dead, wounded or missing. No figures were given for Allied losses.

Despite the shock of their ordeal, most of the Allied soldiers passing through London said they wanted "another crack at Jerry", and their main cry was:

"For God's sake, give us more planes!"

Returning Allied troops declared Belgium was honeycombed with spies and that if it hadn't been for their activities the Allies still would be fighting along the Albert canal.

A British announcement said British, French and Belgian troops numbering about half the original British expeditionary force—estimated at around 300,000—had been brought out safely.

May Not Invade England

Fears of a German invasion of England abated somewhat amid a shift in the wind of German propaganda, now turned full blast on France with German radios blaring a new "on to Paris!" instead of the hitherto popular "we are sailing against England."

Generalissimo Maxine Weygand, commander in chief of the Allied armies, waited for any attack behind the Aisne-Somme line extending from the main Maginot line in the east to Abbeville in the west.

Italy's entry into the war—presumably directed at a flank attack against France—would throw into the struggle approximately 5,000,000 first-line combatants, about 8,000 warplanes, and ninety submarines, and a formidable array of bigger warships. Only recently Italy launched two new 35,000-ton battleships described as the most powerful warships afloat.

Any announcement of Italy's plunge probably would come only after the Italian forces already had struck.

An added indication of Italy's imminent entry into the war was the statement in London that Il Duce had broken off Allied negotiations to relax contraband control in the Mediterranean.

In Washington, President Roosevelt told Congress the "speedy" enlargement of the U. S. defense program "by over a billion dollars" was demanded by "the almost incredible events of the past two weeks in Europe."

Presenting his second special defense message in fifteen days, Mr. Roosevelt said, "as long x x x as the possibility of war exists that x x x all continents may become involved in a world wide war, reasonable precaution demands that American defense be made more certain."

His request for more funds pushed the immediate defense program near $4,500,000,000.

"FIFTH COLUMN" SUSPECTS INTERNED IN BRITAIN

Files of armed soldiers escort this great parade of aliens to interment camps in a town in northern England as Britain rounds up thousands of men and women suspected of being in the "Fifth Column." Britain is taking no chances with aliens since German conquest of Norway and the Low Countries was materially assisted by Nazi sympathizers.

Women, Children

a British officer, dead, his own pistol beside him.

From this port even the fishing boats and the trim little holiday motor craft went across the channel today and came back, loaded with men in khaki.

The navy and the air force stayed grimly on guard.

Across the channel the sun gleamed on the white shore line of France and the green fields beyond.

The black plume of smoke from a huge fire, burning near Dunkerque, mounted the sky.

The men who landed told stories of fighting fiercely only a few hours previously.

"It is an inferno over there; a hell made by man," said one artilleryman.

"The Germans asked for a truce to bury their dead after a 36-hour barrage had help up their advance.

"We replied: 'There's no truce.' And we gave them another seven hours of barrage."

British Heavily Shelled

Another soldier said the Germans shelled the British on the Dunkerque wharves with long-range guns.

"There were some killed," he added.

Every sort of a story was told of the new German strategy of war. Here was one, told by a Tommy:

"We found ten thousand almost perfect, counterfeit, ten-franc notes on one plane that we brought down. Parachute troops are being given this money to disorganize French finances."

Another Tommy told what happened to parachute troops in Flanders:

"I have seen German corpses landing with as many as fifty bullets in them," he said. "They were killed long before they reached the ground."

Through the lush green countryside of England, idyllic in the first flush of summer, sped train after train of mud-stained men.

At the wayside stations they were deluged with fruit, cigarettes, tea, cookies.

The waiting women surrounded the soldiers, piled them with soft drinks, acted as postmen for hastily-scribbled postcards to wives and sweethearts.

Child Greets Brother

On one platform, a six-year old girl sprang into the arms of a grimy soldier. It was her brother, unheard-from for six wekes.

One soldier held a bottle of beer to the lips of a sailor who had both arms swathed with bandages.

Many of the men limped until they saw a sympathetic eye upon them; then they straightened fiercely.

Padres straight from the front and women of the auxiliary territorial services came back with the fighters.

One white-haired vicar praised the discipline of the men on the bomb-blasted beaches across the Echannel. There, he said, they hid in the dunes until rescue came.

The women of the "ats," like the soldiers, showed the strain of sleepless nights under constant fire, air-raids and lack of sleep.

One story of these air-raids and what they do to a man came from a British officer:

"I had six hours sleep in 72, and when the bombing was at its worst, I spent hours lying in ditches, with by teeth clenched and my fingers wedged in my ears, my face buried in the weeds.

"During the last four days we marched miles under incessant bombing and finished up with a ten mile trek along a rough beach before we got to the boats."

Most of the men coming back were in their early twenties, but there were a few be-medalled war veterans, morose and silent.

With them, too, were the French and the Belgians—those men of Leopold who wouldn't stop fighting when he told them to stop.

In the railway stations, the English officers and men, most of them unable to speak French, passed over hard-boiled eggs, sandwiches, and cans of steaming tea to bearded poilus and to chocolate-hued Senegalese with the crescent emblazoned on their turbans or wearing stained scarlet tarboosches.

Bring Down Two Planes

One officer who fought through the lowlands campaign told how his soldiers salvaged a machine gun and ammunition from a German bomber shot down by the RAF and used the gun to bring down two other German planes.

The gun was mounted on a motorcycle sidecar and taken along on the retreat to the sea.

"Two days later," the officer related, "we were bombed at dawn by a Heinkel (German bomber). We had with us a trooper who was an expert shot. Using the German machine gun he brought the Heinkel down x x x.

"When we were about to embark, the enemy had been bombing the quayside trying to get our small boat. Just at dusk the last German plane brought down one of our fighters. The British pilot jumped with his parachute and x x x when the German plane circled low over the sheds where we were sheltered, we got in a burst of machine gun fire that brought him down as well."

An infantryman, Private George Turner, exclaimed:

"We are going to win this bloody war!"

Turner had been asked what he thought of the course to date.

An artilleryman said, "as long as it ends soon, we are satisfied."

Robert Atlee, an infantryman, said of the reembarkation:

"Our navy—it was wonderful."

up in France before trying the blow across the English channel at Britain.

Italy May Enter

Such a plan premeditates concentric attack on Paris, with Germany's axis partner, Italy, thrust in from the south.

The talk among the troops last week that Hitler would unleash his armies against England from newly-won coastline bases has switched to a belief that England will be kept "in a state of jitters" by long-range artillery fire across the channel and sporadic raids by dread dive-bombing Stukas until operations in France are cleaned up.

Word was received that an important communication from Premier Mussolini had reached Hitler's military headquarters. No details were disclosed. (It was announced in Berlin that Hitler had received the Italian ambassador, Dino Alfieri, at his western front headquarters.)

Views Desolate Scenes

My trip back to the battlefront (Lochner was with the German armies in Belgium last week) was through fields pock-marked with shell craters and little towns where fire finished what powder did not destroy.

A 65-mile-wide graveyard of shell-torn tanks between Sedan and Maubeuge told a story of destruction by dive bombers and armor-piercing ammunition.

It was along this stretch of Belgian-French frontier that Germany punched through French defenses two weeks ago with the feint toward Paris that veered into a death-trap salient to the sea.

There was every indication that the French were taken by surprise, although one reliable source told me the French had advance word of the plan to drive a wedge at Sedan.

It was suggested that the French high command either disregarded this—firm in the belief the 1914 strategy of a barn-doorswing down through Belgium would be followed again—or did not expect a drive in such force.

Fighting Is Terrific

The wreckage of the once-quiet country-side shows the fighting in the gap was terrific. Sedan has sagged into pathetic ruin. Maubeuge was badly bombed and shelled. Little towns were nearly wiped away.

Everywhere is the twisted wreckage of tanks. Some are upside down. Others are telescoped in heaps as if hurled against each other with terrific fury. Some plunged through the walls of houses, then were buried by the collapse of the walls and roof. Bullet holes penetrated armor several inches thick. Many were blasted to pieces by bombs.

To questions of how many tanks participated in the bitter attack and counter attack the reply is usually:

"A huge number."

apparently were benefiting from foggy, poor flying weather.

Speedboat Fleet Active

However, it was reported here that the German speedboat fleet was proving troublesome with its torpedoes launched at British warships and that German troops pressed to within six miles of Dunkerque and were apparently laying down a deadly barrage on what is left of the harbor city.

North and south of Lille, French units continued to resist the German "rub-out" process but their fate was regarded here as sealed. Another small Allied force separated from the main battleground in the north near Cassel.

The Berlin newspaper Lokal Anzeiger, in its description of the scene at Dunkerque, said: "The remaining British force is seeking with every possible means — in small boats or even by swimming—to reach ships which are under protection of night and fog while attempting to save soldiers who can be saved, for England needs every single man now."

The press campaign against French "brutality" reached a new height of fury. This developed the feeling that Germans would be driving toward Paris before another week was out.

The "Engelland song" has been supplanted on Nazi lips by the new war song dinned day and night:

TERMED A "MENACE"

Harry Bridges

Sent to the floor of the House of Representatives by the House Rules Committee by unanimous vote was a bill directing the Secretary of Labor to arrest and deport Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO leader, an Australian. Tommies Declare

tled up Allied army remained Britain's greatest concern, informed London observers said they looked for an early attempt by Adolf Hitler to divide England and France with separate offers. These factors were mentioned:

Hitler's Probable Plans

1. Threat would be made of Italian entry into the war to induce acceptance.

2. The French would be threatened with a smashing assault by land and air against Paris.

3. The British would be asked to accept Hitler's terms or face "total war," presumably meaning invasion.

There was no indication anywhere that the British or French would heed separate peace proposals.

Meanwhile the day's developments included the statement from a competent source that Italy had intimated she considered British-Italian negotiations on contraband control as broken off. This came in spite of an agreement on principle last week that an easing of contraband control over Italian ships might be worked out satisfactorily.

The nation, while calling for more planes to turn the tide of war, steeled itself for the expected casualty list from Flanders.

Fight All the Way

"Bloody, bitter fighting all the way," one soldier called it. He came home on one of the seven ships which reached the same port within two hours today.

The men carried all the equipment they could salvage. "We left the heavy stuff behind," one said.

The bombing at Dunkerque, an officer declared, is "terrific," but "the loss of life small."

Those who endured the "blizzard" of bombs and got safely across the channel expressed feelings of sheer luck.

Women and men wept as they welcomed the returning soldiers. Boys who left for Flanders with song on their lips came back powder-burned, tattered, hungry and too exhausted to speak.

British Officer a Suicide

One British officer shot himself in a troop train on the way to London — unable apparently to endure the contrast of security which at last had come to him.

Whether the next great assault will be on England or Paris was regarded as merely a matter of timing. The people expect both sooner or later.

Reliable sources said about two-thirds of the 90,000 troops returned to England are British, of which there were originally 175,000 in Flanders. The other troops brought here are Belgian and French.

No casualty figures have been made public for the Allies. The Nazi losses in Flanders, by Allied estimates, total about 500,000 men.

The "fifth column" drive was pushed with ever greater intensity because of the revelations by returning officers about the spy infestation in north France and Belgium.

"It seemed," declared one, "that if army headquarters moved into a house — even if one of a row — it could be guaranteed that that house would be bombed."

While England welcomed its Flanders survivors it became generally known that with the withdrawal of northern troops, more and more British expeditionary force soldiers are going into another action in France below the Somme rivers.

Lonaconing Girl Gets Scholarship

Miss Roberta Ritchie Gets Music Award at State Teachers College

LONACONING, May 31.—Roberta Ritchie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Ritchie, Detmold district, won a music scholarship at the State Teachers College, Frostburg, it was announced at the local high school, of which she is a student.

The competitive examination was given May 10 by the Phi Omicron Delta sorority to further education in music at State Teachers college next fall. This is the first time that such a plan has been organized.

Miss Ritchie received the high school scholarship equivalent to one semester or vocal instruction. Accompanied by Mrs. Augusta L. Matteson, she sang, "Danny Boy" arranged by Fred E. Weatherly. CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

BILL BAILEY was no fool.

He froze there motionless, as he was ordered to do by somebody with a gun. He couldn't see the gun—all he could see was the blinding beam of light—but he knew, certainly, that the gun was there, and in this he was not mistaken. He just stood with his arms hanging, muscles tense, face strained.

"Mr. Bailey!" the other person suddenly murmured, in recognition.

"You—you—who is it?" Bill managed that much, even as he realized that the voice behind the light beam was somewhat familiar.

"Be as quiet as you can," it commanded. "But relax. I am the maid—Maudie. Mrs. Holmquist. I didn't expect you. I might have killed you, this way."

"The—Maudie?"

"Yes. Sit down in the chair—quietly now—and collect your wits. I expect we scared the daylights out of each other."

"Yes," Bill admitted. He was glad to sit down because sheer nervous strain had begun to make him feel jittery. "Well, you caught me."

"I hope we didn't arouse anybody," she said. "I don't know what you are doing here, but you can guess why I came. To search."

"So did I."

"Why?"

"Well, I—I thought I might find it, and—"

"You knew we were on the case. The police, detectives."

"Yes. But I wanted to help clear it up. The Tways—it was their bracelet, stolen at our party, and I thought I had a good hunch. I thought I might do something that you couldn't very well do."

"I supppose you are right," the woman admitted. "I think, personally, that you are clean. But you admit this places you in a peculiar spot—my finding you here. Now, exactly when did you come here?"

"I don't know. About dinner time. Hour or so ago."

"You were searching?"

"I had already searched this room from A to Z, Mrs. Holmquist. Every crack and cranny except the little table here. It has nothing in it, I'm sure. I was about to open it when I heard you entering. Under the bed was the only place I could go."

"But you came out."

"I decided to tackle you, whoever you were."

"I should have killed you, surely."

"Maybe not, if I could have gotten in a first swing. But I'm glad we didn't get into that. Christopher, a detective must live a dangerous life!"

"Well," the lady said, wryly, "so does a criminal. It's about an even break, I'd say. We usually win in the end. Keep quiet, young man, and let's see the table."

Then it was that Bill remembered the book. The little locked book entitled "Thoughts Day by Day," which had been in his hands when the detective entered. He had unconsciously carried it under the bed with him, and it lay under there on the floor now.

"I'll straighten up the bed," Bill said. "There were house slippers under there. I'll put them like they were."

"All right," she agreed. "Just be silent about it."

He retrieved the little book and held it casually. The detective glanced at it, read the title.

"Probably of no interest to us, but if you can pick the lock and peek in, do so," she said. "Here's a hairpin. Sometimes these locked books are really boxes in disguise. That could hold a bracelet."

The brass lock was easy to open, Bill found.

"It's only a book, after all," said he, "A gift book."

For some reason unaccountable to him he did not mention that it was a diary. It was new, a this year's diary, with a page for each day. Bill flipped some of the pages. Some were blank, some had brief penciled entries. The dates were printed in bold black and a third of the way through he saw dates of the current week. One particular penciled page caught his eye, and in the dimly reflected light he read it:

"What I did on Tuesday night does not weigh on my conscience. I so sadly wanted something, and needed it, so I took the initiative myself. Can that be wrong? I do not wish to hurt anyone. I realize that I acted quite badly, but it was the only way, then. Today I wonder if I did right."

All at once Bill's boyish heart went thumping again.

He was still in a storybook adventure! He, Bill Bailey, who had physical strength and a certain maturity, also had a youthful imagination, and here and now was a chapter of real life romance with himself playing a part.

The lady detective was finishing with the table and its drawer, and all at once Bill knew he did not want her to see inside the book. He determined to act his storybook part some more.

"Nice little book," he spoke casually, "but no jewelry in it. Shall I put it back?"

"Yes, where you found it. I'll fix the trunk back, and then let's get out of here. Headquarters wanted this room searched, but I knew it wouldn't show anything. Any thief would be too smart to leave the jewelry here. I'll edge out the door first, and you follow promptly. Don't speak to me in public, though. Come direct to police headquarters."

"But—"

"I'm sorry, Mr. Bailey, I'll have to insist on that. I am sure you are innocent, just butting in, maybe. But come down and talk to the captain with me. You won't be held."

She left the room and Bill put the locked diary back in the table drawer and followed her. The dresser, the chair, the trunk, the table and bed, everything appeared just as he had found them.

When he was down on the street, he saw Mrs. Holmquist enter a taxicab almost a block away, so he walked to his own car, or rather to the Merrifield car, in which he had come here. For a moment he wondered if he shouldn't ignore her summons to police headquarters. He didn't want to go there; he had a vague dislike for the place. Still, they would doubtless come and get him if he didn't go.

The hour was quite late when the detective captain finally came in, and Bill was tired of waiting for him. He remembered that he was due at The Oaks for dress rehearsal of "Maid to Measure" at 9 p. m. Perhaps he should have telephoned. But then, he had no logical excuse for his absence, that he could tell them. He hoped that Gayle would manage to carry on some way.

After Mrs. Holmquist's report, the detective captain had a great many questions to ask Bill. He traced Bill's every move for that entire day, weighing every detail.

"What led you to suspect this Montesa girl?" the captain repeated, toward the end.

"Nothing," Bill answered again. "Nothing definite, captain. "I was just sort of weeding out. I studied all the others closely, analyzing them, and—"

"You are rather young to be good at character reading, don't you think?"

"Yes, sir. But I wanted to help, somehow. Four of the other girls live with their parents or relatives. Miss Hyde and Miss Montesa live alone, in rooming houses. I—well, I searched Tempe's room, too."

"Hmmm. So did we." The captain smiled at him. "I'll say this much, you aren't afraid to take action, are you, son? But this is serious business. Now tonight you had yourself in a trap. But lay off, can't you, and let us do the work? We're paid to do it. We'll catch the thief if it can be done. And keep mum."

Bill couldn't take offense at that, surely. He thanked the middle-aged captain, and Mrs. Holmquist, then went away. Mrs. Holmquist had said she would be on duty as Gayle's maid again before breakfast.

Bill was somewhat morose as he drove back to the mansion about midnight. He was a little tired, too. He had been in a nervous strain even though the experience had amounted in the long run to a definite adventure.

Moreover, he knew the adventure couldn't be over yet. He had read that revealing entry in pretty Lola Montesa's diary, and he had not shown it nor mentioned it to the police. He wondered why he hadn't. What did he, a somewhat bungling amateur detective, expect to do with that information? He didn't know.

Old Boundary Dispute Breaks Out Again

DELMAR, May 31 (AP) — An old by Mason and Dixon in 1767, has broken out again between Delaware and Maryland—all because of a minor hit-run accident in this town sitting squarely on the state line.

The current dispute revolves around jurisdiction over the Northern half of State street, Delmar's main thoroughfare.

It began when Daniel Truitt's car, parked on the North side of State street, was struck by another car. Police Chief Roland Lecates of Delmar, Delaware, and Chief Arthur Godfrey of Delmar, Maryland, found the hit-run car abandoned near here.

Maryland and Delaware state police were called to view the damaged car.

"It's your accident," Maryland told Delawere in effect, "our line ends at the center of the street."

"You can have it," Delaware replied. "Our line ends at the Northern curb."

So the state police began checking records, hoping to find the path of the original line that Mason and Dixon surveyed in 1767, separating Southern Delaware from the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Students Win Awards For Outstanding Work At Maryland University

COLLEGE PARK, Md., May 31 (AP)—Students excelling in citizenship, scholarship, athletics and other phases of college life were recognized for outstanding accomplishments at the University of Maryland's annual honors and awards assembly.

At the ceremonies held on the campus, twenty-two students received special awards; forty-eight were named to membership in Phi Kappa Phi, national honorary scholarship fraternity; fifty-nine received commission in the Reserve Officers Corps, and fifty-four varsity men and sixty-one freshmen received athletic awards.

Richard Lee of Bethesda and Elizabeth Harrover of Manassas, Va., won the coveted citizenship prizes for the outstanding man and woman graduates of the 1940 class.

The Dinah Berman Memorial medal, for the sophomore student who makes the highest average in his class, went to Stuart Heywood of Westernport.

Lawrence received the Sylvester watch, presented to the man who typifies the best in college athletics. Kehoe received the Charles L. Linhardt ring, presented to Maryland's outstanding athlete of the year.

Earl Springer, southpaw pitcher from Hagerstown, received the Bozie Berger award as the outstanding senior in baseball and Leo Mueller and Oscar Nevares, both of Baltimore, shared the Edward Powell award for the most valuable Lacrosse player.

Opposes Neely Booking Bill

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP) — A Portlandt, Ore., theater owner expresses belief that the Neely bill (S280) to prohibit compulsory block booking of motion pictures was "prompted by a group of well-meaning but misinformed reformers."

Robert White, the witness, told the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce committee at least eighty per cent of those financially affected by the bill were opposed to its passage.

He suggested a regulatory board within the industry would be more satisfactory.

E. L. Kuykendall of Columbus, Miss., president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, asserted the bill was detrimental to the best interests of independents and expressed belief problems of the movie industry could not be solved by its passage.

The snowshoe rabbits of Alaska are so called because of thick pads of hair which cover their feet in winter, facilitating their progress over the snow. In summer their fur is brown instead of white.

SUES BARRYMORE

Dolores Costello Barrymore

Third wife of John Barrymore, Dolores Costello Barrymore sued the actor in Supreme Court, New York, to collect $4,150. She claims the sum is due on a $5,250 promissory note he gave her to reimburse her for money she gave his creditors. She says Barrymore, now in Hollywood, has not paid any of the monthly installments since Feb. 1, 1939.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

YOU CAN IF YOU MUST

A COLORED boy told about seeing a rabbit climb a tree. "Go on," said his friend, "How can a rabbit climb a tree?" The first one answered: "This rabbit had to." So it is with some contracts. If you have to make a certain play or plays succeed in order to make the contract, you cannot do otherwise than try it or them.

North and South were using the new Barclay slam convention. After 3-Spades, fixing a declaration for the side, North feared 3-No Trumps would sound like a natural bid, so used 4-Clubs as the lowest possible safe ace-asker. Since 4-Diamonds would have shown none, 4-Hearts one, South showed two with his 4-Spades. North's 4-No Trumps then inquired about kings. With 5-Clubs South would have shown none, with 5-Diamonds one, so his 5-Hearts showed two. The 5-No Trumps then asked about queens and South showed one. That was enough for over-ambitious North to try the grand slam in No Trumps.

North saw his only chance was with a successful diamond finesse and perhaps a squeeze, after East led the heart Q. He took it with the K, cashed five spades, sent the diamond Q through when West didn't cover, laid down the diamond A, then led a heart to the A on the board. Now if one player held four clubs and also the diamond K, the contract was sure, even if the clubs wouldn't break. That is what happened. In order to keep the diamond K guarding dummy's Q, West tossed off one of his clubs, so four club tricks for North completed the contract.

REFUSE TO BE CROWDED

WHENEVER a good player makes a high opening bid, four of a major or four or five of a minor suit, he is trying to shut out opponents with a hand which he considers weak defensively. With most strong players the same applies if the original bid is only three of a suit. Such bids intimidate many opponents, but there are stalwart souls who often find out how to reach the right contract in spite of such efforts to crowd them into the wrong contract.

West led the spade A, which South ruffed. The diamond K fell to the A and the spade Q was returned, in order to kill off the dummy's K as a medium of a discard. East ruffed with his best trump, the 10, but South overruffed with the J. Another diamond, two high hearts dropping the Q and a run of solid tricks completed the hand.

After the deal a post-mortem of all the scores in the duplicate tournament where this freak was dealt disclosed that nobody reached a contract of 6-Hearts, which would have given the bidder top score if doubled and made.

Following West's 4-Spades and North's double, South had a much better bid to make than 6-Diamonds. It was 5-Spades. North could not possibly misread this. His job then would have been to bid small slam in his longest suit, which was hearts. Of course, this could have been set by an inspired club lead, but who is there that would make that lead in view of the bidding?

Belgians Deny King's Children Are in Portugal

LISBON, Portugal, May 31 (AP)—The Belgian Legation has denied French reports that the children of King Leopold were here or were coming to Portugal.

The legation also issued a statement describing the king as "a German prisoner." It assailed French Premier Paul Reynaud for "insulting" the sovereign in his caustic speech early Tuesday in which Reynaud told of the king's capitulation and that of his army.

"Surrender is no dishonor when all the means to carry on the fight are exhausted," the statement said.

Lawrence received the Sylvester watch, presented to the man who typifies the best in college athletics. Kehoe received the Charles L. Linhardt ring, presented to Maryland's outstanding athlete of the year.

Earl Springer, southpaw pitcher from Hagerstown, received the Bozie Berger award as the outstanding senior in baseball and Leo Mueller and Oscar Nevares, both of Baltimore, shared the Edward Powell award for the most valuable Lacrosse player.

Opposes Neely Booking Bill

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP) — A Portlandt, Ore., theater owner expresses belief that the Neely bill (S280) to prohibit compulsory block booking of motion pictures was "prompted by a group of well-meaning but misinformed reformers."

Robert White, the witness, told the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce committee at least eighty per cent of those financially affected by the bill were opposed to its passage.

He suggested a regulatory board within the industry would be more satisfactory.

E. L. Kuykendall of Columbus, Miss., president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, asserted the bill was detrimental to the best interests of independents and expressed belief problems of the movie industry could not be solved by its passage.

The snowshoe rabbits of Alaska are so called because of thick pads of hair which cover their feet in winter, facilitating their progress over the snow. In summer their fur is brown instead of white.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

YOU CAN IF YOU MUST

A COLORED boy told about seeing a rabbit climb a tree. "Go on," said his friend, "How can a rabbit climb a tree?" The first one answered: "This rabbit had to." So it is with some contracts. If you have to make a certain play or plays succeed in order to make the contract, you cannot do otherwise than try it or them.

North and South were using the new Barclay slam convention. After 3-Spades, fixing a declaration for the side, North feared 3-No Trumps would sound like a natural bid, so used 4-Clubs as the lowest possible safe ace-asker. Since 4-Diamonds would have shown none, 4-Hearts one, South showed two with his 4-Spades. North's 4-No Trumps then inquired about kings. With 5-Clubs South would have shown none, with 5-Diamonds one, so his 5-Hearts showed two. The 5-No Trumps then asked about queens and South showed one. That was enough for over-ambitious North to try the grand slam in No Trumps.

North saw his only chance was with a successful diamond finesse and perhaps a squeeze, after East led the heart Q. He took it with the K, cashed five spades, sent the diamond Q through when West didn't cover, laid down the diamond A, then led a heart to the A on the board. Now if one player held four clubs and also the diamond K, the contract was sure, even if the clubs wouldn't break. That is what happened. In order to keep the diamond K guarding dummy's Q, West tossed off one of his clubs, so four club tricks for North completed the contract.

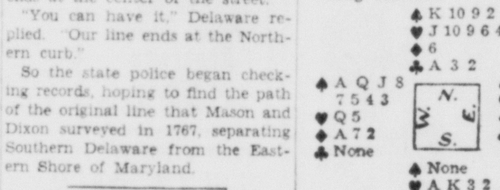
REFUSE TO BE CROWDED

WHENEVER a good player makes a high opening bid, four of a major or four or five of a minor suit, he is trying to shut out opponents with a hand which he considers weak defensively. With most strong players the same applies if the original bid is only three of a suit. Such bids intimidate many opponents, but there are stalwart souls who often find out how to reach the right contract in spite of such efforts to crowd them into the wrong contract.



(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
4 ♠	Dbl	Pass	6 ♦
Dbl

West led the spade A, which South ruffed. The diamond K fell to the A and the spade Q was returned, in order to kill off the dummy's K as a medium of a discard. East ruffed with his best trump, the 10, but South overruffed with the J. Another diamond, two high hearts dropping the Q and a run of solid tricks completed the hand.

After the deal a post-mortem of all the scores in the duplicate tournament where this freak was dealt disclosed that nobody reached a contract of 6-Hearts, which would have given the bidder top score if doubled and made.

Following West's 4-Spades and North's double, South had a much better bid to make than 6-Diamonds. It was 5-Spades. North could not possibly misread this. His job then would have been to bid small slam in his longest suit, which was hearts. Of course, this could have been set by an inspired club lead, but who is there that would make that lead in view of the bidding?

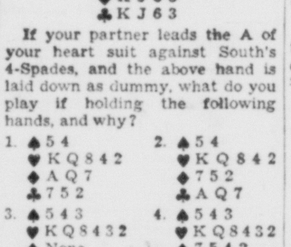
Your Week-End Lesson



If your partner leads the A of your heart suit against South's 4-Spades, and the above hand is laid down as dummy, what do you play if holding the following hands, and why?

Belgians Deny King's Children Are in Portugal

LISBON, Portugal, May 31 (AP)—The Belgian Legation has denied French reports that the children of King Leopold were here or were coming to Portugal.

The legation also issued a statement describing the king as "a German prisoner." It assailed French Premier Paul Reynaud for "insulting" the sovereign in his caustic speech early Tuesday in which Reynaud told of the king's capitulation and that of his army.

"Surrender is no dishonor when all the means to carry on the fight are exhausted," the statement said.

Sprays Are Tested

RIDGELEY, Md., May 31 (AP)—A test in which control of pea aphis or plant lice by a nicotine vaporizing machine was declared ninety-nine per cent effective was shown to agriculturalists at the University of Maryland's plant sub-station here this week.

Results of tests in which seven other slower-acting sprays were used will not be known for several days, said Herman A. Hunter, crop specialist of the university.

Planters, seedmen, and farm leaders from Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Washington state and Wisconsin attended the demonstrations.

Tea Party Is Fine Mixer for Commencement Gatherings

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Feature Service Writer

If you are on the social committee at commencement time, do plan a tea. It proves the most fun for the least effort and is the almost perfect way to mix the old and new grads.

Cook up the refreshments well in advance and serve them from some interesting spot. The party really carries itself. Committee members have to be on hand merely to see that dishes of food are promptly replenished.

Sandwiches—hordes of them — a beverage (Maybe two), small cakes or cookies and sherbet, if you like, are plenty.

A trayful of assorted sandwiches is most inviting, when arranged attractively. This gives the guests a chance to make several selections from one dish. Here are some enticing sandwich suggestions; Cream cheese, mixed with chopped pimiento-stuffed olives and mayonnaise, spread on Graham bread; chopped salted peanuts blended into salad dressing and diced celery, and spread on white bread slices; finely chopped cress, ham and minced onions, blended together and moistened with salad dressing and served with white bread; yellow cream cheese, mixed with finely diced olives and pickles, then spread on thin slices of white bread and rolled. Vary the shapes and sizes of the sandwiches, but arrange all of one kind in each pile.

For other sandwich blends, mix together chopped chicken, celery and lettuce and serve the mixture on rounds of white bread; fill tiny hard rolls, scooped out and buttered, with tuna or shrimp salad and fit thin slices of cold tongue between Graham bread slices — men like these, so make a lot. Boston brown.

Here's an effective commencement tea layout. The little figures help the effect, but you don't have to be quite so elaborate in your decorations.

date-nut, raisin, candied fruit peels and other dark-colored breads work up into delicious sandwiches and they give pleasing color contrast to the serving tray. These also appeal to most men.

If your are pressed for time the day of the tea, make the sandwiches in advance. They will keep splendidly if well wrapped in waxed paper, then in damp cloth and kept in the refrigerator. It is always best to put out sandwiches as needed, so your sliced eggs won't curl or your bread dry out.

* * *

Hot coffee always makes a hit with tea fare and you had better have pots of it on either end of the table if the crowd is large. For a scorching day a chilled tart punch will have many followers. Serve it from a bowl set on a table nearby or on one side of the main table.

Select cookies and cakes that are easy to eat and not sticky. Drop or rolled cocoanut, date, nut, spice and sugar cookies will do nicely. Slice of angel food and sponge cake and small drop cakes, encased in paper cups are always up with dainty frostings. You might do some in the school colors.

When serving sherbet, pass it in cups so the guests can place them right on their own serving plates. Raspberry, apricot-pineapple, lime, orange-leman and strawberry mint are especially cooling and come in delightful colors.

Rolled Sandwich Fillings

HAM SPREAD—Blend together 1 small can of potted ham with 1 tablespoon butter.

OLIVES AND HORSERADISH BUTTER—Mix together thoroughly 8 minced stuffed olives, 2 tablespoons horseradish, 4 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise.

SHRIMP PASTE—Blend together equal parts of anchovy paste and fresh boiled shrimps until they form a paste. Spread on lettuce or mix with chopped cucumbers, dipped in French dressing.

CHEESE AND CHEESE BLEND—Combine equal portions of cottage cheese with finely chopped watercress. Preserved cherries, lettuce or onions may be used for variations.

CHICKEN SAVORY—To one cup finely chopped chicken, add one-third cup diced celery, one-fourth cup chopped salted almonds, one-fourth teaspoon salt, and one-eighth teaspoon paprika; blend with three tablespoons mayonnaise.

Mushroom Nuggets For Cocktail Party

For your next cocktail party try this new canape: Toast one and one-half inch rounds of white bread on one side. Spread salad dressing mixed with a little relish lightly on the untoasted side. Top with mushroom tops and spread melted butter on them quickly. Toast or broil until the mushrooms are browned. Sprinkle quickly with salt, pepper, celery salt and lemon juice. Serve hot—and listen to your guests rave.

IN HER CUPS--50,000 STRONG

Enid Holmes seems to be up to her ears in cups as she prepares for the annual all-states picnic at Ontario, Cal. This is the biggest picnic of its kind in the world, with more than 50,000 expected to attend—therefore the cups, which are her job to keep clean.

Use for Leftover Rolls and Biscuits

Leftover rolls and biscuits sometimes go begging, but when fixed up like this they become first-raters: Split the rolls, toast them lightly on both sides, and then spread them with a mixture of butter, grated cheese, a dash of onion, chili sauce and chopped parsley. Reheat and serve with soups or salads.

To serve th. rolls with the main part of a meal, just spread them with butter mixed with a little cheese.

Pickle Canape

Here is a different tasty canape suggestion: Remove the centers of large sour or dill pickles with a fruit corer and stuff the pickles with white cream cheese, lightly seasoned with chopped onions, minced parsley and pimentos. Chill for an hour or longer. Then, with a sharp knife, cut off ½ inch crossway slices. Serve on toasted crackers or stick in wood picks and arrange on a flat tray.

Cake Frosting Hint

A cake, several days old, will regain its youth if you give it a filling and new frosting. Put a creamy, caramel, nut, or fruit filling in white, yellow or spice cake and frost with white icing. If the old frosting on cake becomes hard, remove it and freshen up the cake with a new icing.

Warmed-Up Sandwiches

If you have sandwiches leftover from some evening function, wrap them in waxed paper and store them in the refrigerator. Next noon, cut them into strips and toast them for luncheon.

Spice Notes

Here are some spice tips: add a little powdered sage to creamed dried beef, thyme to corned beef hash, powdered bay leaf to veal loaf and celery seed to egg omelet.

New Labor Union Pledges Never To Go on Strike

PHILADELPHIA, May 31 (AP) — A new unaffiliated labor union, pledged never to strike and with power to sue and be sued, has established headquarters in a mid-city office building and opened a drive for members.

W. H. Gotwald, secretary, said that recruits for the United Crafts Guild would be drawn entirely from federal, state and municipal employes. He estimated 3,000,000 in the United States are eligible.

"We formed to give governmental employes an opportunity to unite and protect themselves from abuses and coercion," Gotwald added.

"We are non-political and unaffiliated with any other labor union. Our greatest service to our members will be in providing legal services to protect them."

Gotwald pointed out that a "no-strike" clause is a part of the union's charter. The union was incorporated in Delaware a week ago.

Incorporators are the Rev. William B. Forney, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance in Pennsylvania; John W. Lee, Philadelphia insurance man; William W. Ford, former associate of Mr. Forney, and Paul Hart, operator of a chain of garages and parking lots in Philadelphia.

A group of legal and civic leaders in Philadelphia form an advisory board.

The Golden Text

"I am the light of the world."

"By their fruits ye shall know them."—Matt. 7:16.

Testing Conduct by Its Usefulness

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — G-1

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for June 2 is Ezekiel 15-1-6; Matthew 5:13-16; 7:16-20; I Corinthians 10:6, 7, the Golden Text being Matthews 7:16, "By their fruits ye shall know them.")

"TESTING Conduct by Its Usefulness" is the subject of today's lesson. Ezekiel, a prophet who is thought to have written the lines which comprise today's lesson in 591 B. C., was in captivity at the time, but he did not cease giving his message to his people, and warning them against the dangers threatening them because of their disobedience to the Lord's will. He lived at Tel-abib, on the canal Chebar.

The Israelites were sure they were Jehovah's chosen people and that He would save them no matter what they did, but Ezekiel points out that like a vine among forest trees, Israel is not a strong, firm nation.

"What is the vine-tree more than any tree, the vine-branch which is among the trees of the forest?

"Shall wood be taken thereof to make any work? . . . behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel; the fire hath devoured both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned: is it profitable for any work? . . .

"Therefore, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: As the vine-tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem."

Uses Simple Illustration

Ezekiel here uses a simple, natural illustration that the people could easily understand, just as Jesus used such terms to illustrate his meaning. For us today Ezekiel's message comes as a reminder that we must be "profitable for any work," or we, too, will be found wanting and only good to be used for fuel to be burned. Our conduct will be tested for its usefulness.

Our lesson then takes us to the New Testament first, to Matthew. The apostle, too, tells us that to be a real Christian, we must not forget that superficiality, lip-service and hypocrisy must be banished from our lives. The world needs good, honest, right acting and right thinking men and women to bring it through the crises of life.

He likens such a person to salt, which is needed not only by men, but by animals to sustain life and to keep it healthy. If we are indifferent, not actively righteous, we are like salt that has lost its taste, and therefore is no good.

"Ye are the salt of the earth," says Matthew. "But if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out and trodden under foot of man."

Again he says: "Ye (the righteous) are the light of the world. A city set on a hill cannot be hid." Many cities in the ancient countries are built on hills, and as many of the houses in such cities are made of a very white limestone, they are visible from long distances away.

So are people who are truly good. Can't you recall people you have known who were like white cities set upon a hill, so outstanding were their characters? Not that they were boastful of their virtue, usually such persons are the most modest in the world; but that their goodness could not be hidden. Such are indeed "the light of the world."

Then the figure of speech is changed somewhat, but the thought is the same. "Neither do men light a lamp, and put it under a bushel, but on a stand; and it shineth unto all that are in the house." The "bushel" spoken of is a word denoting a measure containing about a peck, but the term serves to illustrate the fact that goodness sheds a light on all those who come within its influence. It helps others to find their way in the darkness of temptation and turmoil of life.

Even so let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven.

"By their fruits ye shall know them. Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?

"Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but the corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

"Therefore, by their fruits ye shall know them."

The last Bible reference in our lesson is to I Corinthians, where Paul, writing to the Corinthians, tells them they must withstand temptation and not "lust after evil things," but must be strong for the right.

Testing Conduct by Its Usefulness — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Ezekiel 15:1-6; Matthew 5:13-16; 7:16-20; I Corinthians 10:6, 7.

Ezekiel, the prophet, tells the Jews that if they disobey the Lord he will treat them as the vine tree of the forest is treated—which "is cast into the fire for fuel" because it is otherwise useless.

Matthew likens good Christians to the "salt of the earth," but if they are lukewarm, they, like "salt that has lost its savor," are good for nothing "but to be trodden under foot of man."

Also Matthew likens the truly righteous to "a city set on a hill," which "cannot be hid," for such cities in the Orient are made of white limestone which may be seen afar off.

Men do not light a lamp and put it under a basket, says Matthew, but on a stand, to give light; so should the good set an example to others.

New Labor Union Pledges Never To Go on Strike

PHILADELPHIA, May 31 (AP) — A new unaffiliated labor union, pledged never to strike and with power to sue and be sued, has established headquarters in a mid-city office building and opened a drive for members.

W. H. Gotwald, secretary, said that recruits for the United Crafts Guild would be drawn entirely from federal, state and municipal employes. He estimated 3,000,000 in the United States are eligible.

"We formed to give governmental employes an opportunity to unite and protect themselves from abuses and coercion," Gotwald added.

"We are non-political and unaffiliated with any other labor union. Our greatest service to our members will be in providing legal services to protect them."

Gotwald pointed out that a "no-strike" clause is a part of the union's charter. The union was incorporated in Delaware a week ago.

Incorporators are the Rev. William B. Forney, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance in Pennsylvania; John W. Lee, Philadelphia insurance man; William W. Ford, former associate of Mr. Forney, and Paul Hart, operator of a chain of garages and parking lots in Philadelphia.

A group of legal and civic leaders in Philadelphia form an advisory board.

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

G-1

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for June 2 is Ezekiel 15-1-6; Matthew 5:13-16; 7:16-20; I Corinthians 10:6, 7, the Golden Text being Matthews 7:16, "By their fruits ye shall know them.")

"TESTING Conduct by Its Usefulness" is the subject of today's lesson. Ezekiel, a prophet who is thought to have written the lines which comprise today's lesson in 591 B. C., was in captivity at the time, but he did not cease giving his message to his people, and warning them against the dangers threatening them because of their disobedience to the Lord's will. He lived at Tel-abib, on the canal Chebar.

The Israelites were sure they were Jehovah's chosen people and that He would save them no matter what they did, but Ezekiel points out that like a vine among forest trees, Israel is not a strong, firm nation.

"What is the vine-tree more than any tree, the vine-branch which is among the trees of the forest?

"Shall wood be taken thereof to make any work? . . . behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel; the fire hath devoured both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned: is it profitable for any work? . . .

"Therefore, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: As the vine-tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem."

Uses Simple Illustration

Ezekiel here uses a simple, natural illustration that the people could easily understand, just as Jesus used such terms to illustrate his meaning. For us today Ezekiel's message comes as a reminder that we must be "profitable for any work," or we, too, will be found wanting and only good to be used for fuel to be burned. Our conduct will be tested for its usefulness.

Our lesson then takes us to the New Testament first, to Matthew. The apostle, too, tells us that to be a real Christian, we must not forget that superficiality, lip-service and hypocrisy must be banished from our lives. The world needs good, honest, right acting and right thinking men and women to bring it through the crises of life.

He likens such a person to salt, which is needed not only by men, but by animals to sustain life and to keep it healthy. If we are indifferent, not actively righteous, we are like salt that has lost its taste, and therefore is no good.

"Ye are the salt of the earth," says Matthew. "But if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out and trodden under foot of man."

Again he says: "Ye (the righteous) are the light of the world. A city set on a hill cannot be hid." Many cities in the ancient countries are built on hills, and as many of the houses in such cities are made of a very white limestone, they are visible from long distances away.

So are people who are truly good. Can't you recall people you have known who were like white cities set upon a hill, so outstanding were their characters? Not that they were boastful of their virtue, usually such persons are the most modest in the world; but that their goodness could not be hidden. Such are indeed "the light of the world."

Then the figure of speech is changed somewhat, but the thought is the same. "Neither do men light a lamp, and put it under a bushel, but on a stand; and it shineth unto all that are in the house." The "bushel" spoken of is a word denoting a measure containing about a peck, but the term serves to illustrate the fact that goodness sheds a light on all those who come within its influence. It helps others to find their way in the darkness of temptation and turmoil of life.

Even so let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven.

"By their fruits ye shall know them. Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?

"Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but the corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

"Therefore, by their fruits ye shall know them."

The last Bible reference in our lesson is to I Corinthians, where Paul, writing to the Corinthians, tells them they must withstand temptation and not "lust after evil things," but must be strong for the right.

Testing Conduct by Its Usefulness — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Ezekiel 15:1-6; Matthew 5:13-16; 7:16-20; I Corinthians 10:6, 7.

Ezekiel, the prophet, tells the Jews that if they disobey the Lord he will treat them as the vine tree of the forest is treated—which "is cast into the fire for fuel" because it is otherwise useless.

Matthew likens good Christians to the "salt of the earth," but if they are lukewarm, they, like "salt that has lost its savor," are good for nothing "but to be trodden under foot of man."

Also Matthew likens the truly righteous to "a city set on a hill," which "cannot be hid," for such cities in the Orient are made of white limestone which may be seen afar off.

Men do not light a lamp and put it under a basket, says Matthew, but on a stand, to give light; so should the good set an example to others.

Ferry Company Must Cut Rates

BALTIMORE, May 31 (AP)—A reduction of forty per cent in passenger fares charged by the Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry Company, effecting an annual savings to the public of about $54,000, has been ordered by the Public Service Commission.

No action was taken on rates charged for automobiles and trucks.

The ruling takes effect in ten days unless the ferry company files a protest within that time. Philip Perlman, company counsel, said tonight he was studying the decision and was not yet prepared to say if it would be appealed.

"But I can say that I do not think the evidence justified the conclusion of the commission," Perlman added.

Bonds Stronger

NEW YORK, May 31 (AP)—Bonds showed some recovery today from the shock of the Belgian surrender which had pulled prices down Wednesday. The trend turned generally upward after early hesitation and numerous corporate and foreign dollar loans were ahead 1 to 2 points at the close. U. S. Governments were mixed at 10-32ds lower to 6-32ds higher.

Transactions totaled $4,329,600 face value against $4,334,550 Wednesday.

Ferry Company Must Cut Rates

BALTIMORE, May 31 (AP)—A reduction of forty per cent in passenger fares charged by the Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry Company, effecting an annual savings to the public of about $54,000, has been ordered by the Public Service Commission.

No action was taken on rates charged for automobiles and trucks.

The ruling takes effect in ten days unless the ferry company files a protest within that time. Philip Perlman, company counsel, said tonight he was studying the decision and was not yet prepared to say if it would be appealed.

"But I can say that I do not think the evidence justified the conclusion of the commission," Perlman added.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 10¢ and 25¢. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

Make Red Cross Pledge

Determined to render prompt financial aid to the war sufferers of Europe, the local Red Cross unit, at a meeting held Monday at the home of Mrs. J. C. Cobey, planned to riase $700 or more within a short time and send the entire amount to Washington headquarters, including the fifteen percent which is usually set aside for local use. The first donation to the campaign was ten dollars from George Savage, Grahamtown.

In addition to voluntary contributions, the Red Cross committee will sponsor a public card party Monday evening, June 10, at St. Michael's hall for the purpose of raising funds.

It was also decided by the committee to request the Frostburg Ministerial Union to set aside one Sunday for special prayers and fasting, the purpose being to have members of the cooperating churches deny themselves of a Sunday dinner and contribute the price of the dinner to the Red Cross fund.

The ladies who met at the Cobey home and initiated the local Red Cross drive for funds included Mesdames J. C. Cobey, Julia Tyler, Arthur Roe, J. Marshall Price, Alex Sloan, Arthur W. Taylor, R. E. Sliger, Ada Dillon, Frederick Y. Borden, G. Kear Hosken, Amer Suter, Benjamin H. McCrackin, Julius Abramson, this city, and Norris A. Lineweaver, Eckart.

Hyndman Ready To Celebrate Anniversary

Parade To Mark Opening of Centennial Event on June 10

HYNDMAN, Pa., May 31—The town of Hyndman is all ready to celebrate its one hundredth birthday.

The homes, business places, and streets are adorned with flags and buting, the Volunteer Fire company has combined with the Playground association to make this the largest celebration in the Tri-State area this year.

A new history has been written telling how the town was carved out of the wilderness, and of the fights between the old settlers and the Indians. The town was first called Bridgeport, due to the fact, that the settlement, as started for the purpose of building canal boats to be floated down Wills Creek and used on the old C. & P. canal between Cumberland and Washington, D. C. Later in the year 1840 it was renamed Hyndman, in honor of E. K. Hyndman, at that time an important official of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. This history will be distributed to the public for souvenirs.

The celebration will be opened when one of the largest parades ever held in this section gets under way, June 10, at 6:30 p. m. The line will be made up of the leading bands, floats, and fire companies of nearby Pennsylvania, Maryland, and West Virginia. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad company will have in the parade one of their oldest locomotives, and cabooses, manned by six girls in railroad uniforms. Leading the parade will be the town officials and officers of the sponsoring association. The parade will terminate at the playground where they will be entertained by a leading carnival. Also at the ground will be an antique display containing antiques from the surrounding territory. Baltimore and Ohio also will display some of their oldest relics.

Hyndman Ready To Celebrate Anniversary

Parade To Mark Opening of Centennial Event on June 10

HYNDMAN, Pa., May 31—The town of Hyndman is all ready to celebrate its one hundredth birthday.

The homes, business places, and streets are adorned with flags and buting, the Volunteer Fire company has combined with the Playground association to make this the largest celebration in the Tri-State area this year.

A new history has been written telling how the town was carved out of the wilderness, and of the fights between the old settlers and the Indians. The town was first called Bridgeport, due to the fact, that the settlement, as started for the purpose of building canal boats to be floated down Wills Creek and used on the old C. & P. canal between Cumberland and Washington, D. C. Later in the year 1840 it was renamed Hyndman, in honor of E. K. Hyndman, at that time an important official of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. This history will be distributed to the public for souvenirs.

The celebration will be opened when one of the largest parades ever held in this section gets under way, June 10, at 6:30 p. m. The line will be made up of the leading bands, floats, and fire companies of nearby Pennsylvania, Maryland, and West Virginia. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad company will have in the parade one of their oldest locomotives, and cabooses, manned by six girls in railroad uniforms. Leading the parade will be the town officials and officers of the sponsoring association. The parade will terminate at the playground where they will be entertained by a leading carnival. Also at the ground will be an antique display containing antiques from the surrounding territory. Baltimore and Ohio also will display some of their oldest relics.

Young G. O. P. Hear Administration Policies Assailed

Defense Message Of F.D.R. Termed Publicity Stunt

Senator Fred Bradley Says Speech Aimed at Third Term Nomination

Declares He Took Issue with Early Adjournment of Congress

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., May 31 (AP) —Representative Fred Bradley (R-Mich) declared tonight that President Roosevelt's first national defense message was the "first political speech aimed at a third term nomination."

The Detroit legislator, speaking at the state meeting of the young Republican league, scored administration policies with regard to both foreign and domestic situations and asserted the president's appearance before congress fifteen days ago was a "political publicity stunt from start to finish."

"It was personally and dramatically staged by the president not to arouse the congress of the United States, not to call our attention to our state of unpreparedness, not to call our attention to the alarming state of affairs in Europe, not to call our attention to the demagogic stated need for unity in this nation, but it was staged purely and simply for one purpose—to alarm and arouse the American people," he declared in a prepared address.

Bradley was the main speaker at a "rally" session which featured the appearance of the party's two principal nominees, Mayor D. Boone Dawson, of Charleston, the gubernatorial aspirant, and State Senator Thomas Sweeney, of Wheeling, the senatorial nominee. National committeewoman Cara L. Ebert and State Chairman Robert H. C. Kay also spoke. The league will elect officers tomorrow and receive convention reports.

Bradley took issue with an early adjournment of congress, although the president said "he would not hesitate to call us back onto special session if some unusual defense requirement demanded it."

"How can you drive a team of horses when the horses are out in the field and the driver back in the barn?" he asked.

"Congress should remain in session, the American people demand it and I shall vote against adjournment of this session."

The Michigan Republican questioned the administration's proposal to let foreign nations have aircraft ahead of army and navy orders.

"I sincerely feel that in the interests of self preservation," he declared, we are wholly justified in insisting that our foreign friends should be able to purchase aircraft in this country only when our own armed forces have been adequately supplied."

Pointing to recent testimony of high army officers that national defense needs are lacking, Bradley asked:

"Oh, Mr. President, what have you done with these billions we've given you. If you couldn't prepare our army in peace time, how can we trust you to prepare it in times of international crisis?"

Continuing:

"No, Mr. President, in this question of preparedness, you have been as woefully inefficient, as woefully extravagant, as woefully incapable as you have been in many other of your New Deal experiments of the past eight years."

He warned against "fifth column" dangers, but told the audience that the foreign situation should not "blind us" to domestic problems, unemployment, a farm question, social security and others.

All remain to be solved, he said.

Many Varieties Of Potatoes Are Grown in Garrett

3,855 Planted for Tests by Extension Service in Nearby County

GRANTSVILLE, May 31 — Cooperating with the United States Department of Agriculture, a wide variety of potatoes have been planted in Garrett county this spring. According to Dr. Robert A. Jehle, of the University of Maryland Extension service, the planting includes some 3855 different varieties, which are being studied to determine their resistance to blight, wilt, and other diseases, as well as for their yield and quality. Dakota Red, Irish Cobbler, Rural, Russet and Green Mountain are among the principal varieties which are most extensively grown in this section at present. Mr. Jehle said some of the new seedlings and new varieties showed more resistance to disease and promised a better yield, and better cooking quality than some of those previously grown.

The state is endeavoring, through these tests, to increase its potato crop to a degree equal to the standard of other potato growing states.

South Charleston Bank Robbery Is Nearing Solution

Pictures of Men Now Held for $19,000 Hold-up Are Identified

CINCINNATI, May 31 (AP) — G-Men linked two accused bank bandits today to robberies totaling upwrad of $70,000 in three states, while a Hamilton county grand jury charged them in indictments with a $30,110 raid, Tuesday, on a branch of the Central Trust Co.

The men, Elmer Whitt, 30, of Columbus and Ivan Phillips, 33-year-old night club operator of Marion, O., were charged with entry into a bank to commit a felony; armed robbery of Herbert Jeffries, teller, and theft of an automobile in which they made a short-lived escape.

CHARLESTON W., Va., May 31.—(AP)—State police erased the one black mark against their bank robbery record today, confident that tentative identification of two men held at Cincinnati had solved the $19,000 daylight hold-up of the First National bank of South Charleston.

Superintendent C. C. Tallman announced that most of the employes and customers who were in the bank on November 18, 1939 declared that pictures of Elmer Whitt and Ivan Phillips were those of the men who ordered them to the floor and made off with bundles of cash.

Whitt, 30, of Columbus, and Phillips, 33, of Marion, O., are under indictment at Cincinnati on three counts for the $30,110 robbery of the Avondale branch of the Central Trust Company last Tuesday.

They were captured four hours after the robbery when a garage attendant noticed $2,000 lying on the floor of their car, and state officers, interested because of the tactics used, went to Cincinnati to interview them. Several employes and bank customers went to Cincinnati today in an attempt to establish personal identification.

Tallman said neither man would talk about the South Charleston robbery, but he described the two affairs as very similar.

The apprehension gave back to the troopers their record of no unsolved bank robberies in West Virginia, Tallman declared.

The biggest of recent years was the 1938 holdup of the same First National bank. Three men subsequently were captured, most of the loot recovered, and long prison terms imposed.

Because Ohio has a mandatory life sentence for bank robbery, Tallman said this state would not make a bid for custody of the two men at least until Ohio had completed its case.

Father and Son Banquet Is Held At Cresaptown

Dr. Landsberg, Formerly of Germany, Speaks to Eighty Guests

CRESAPTOWN, May 31.—Approximately eighty people attended the father and son banquet Wednesday night in the school cafeteria, sponsored by Cresaptown Troop 9 Boy Scouts.

Dr. Helmut Landsberg, former scout commissioner of Bavaria, Germany, spoke on "Scouting in Germany Before and After Hitler."

Landsberg spoke of his scout organizing in Bavaria and of the scout jamborees he attended. Thirty-five nations attended the jamborees but Italy, Russia, and Germany were not represented.

"Scouting is a full life for boys and helps them act like men," said Dr. Landsberg. "In 1933, scouts were taken from the scout ranks in Germany and taught the Hitler Youth Movement. I was then scout commander of 30,000 scouts, twenty-two years old, and was still a student. We had no background; fathers didn't care about their boys, nor what they did. When scouting was named a menace to the state by Hitler and his secret police, my accompaniments and I were chased rather rapidly from Germany."

Dr. Lansberg gave the Adolf Hitler pledge which is:

Adolf Hitler, thou art our leader;

Defense Message Of F.D.R. Termed Publicity Stunt

Senator Fred Bradley Says Speech Aimed at Third Term Nomination

Declares He Took Issue with Early Adjournment of Congress

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., May 31 (AP) —Representative Fred Bradley (R-Mich) declared tonight that President Roosevelt's first national defense message was the "first political speech aimed at a third term nomination."

The Detroit legislator, speaking at the state meeting of the young Republican league, scored administration policies with regard to both foreign and domestic situations and asserted the president's appearance before congress fifteen days ago was a "political publicity stunt from start to finish."

"It was personally and dramatically staged by the president not to arouse the congress of the United States, not to call our attention to our state of unpreparedness, not to call our attention to the alarming state of affairs in Europe, not to call our attention to the demagogic stated need for unity in this nation, but it was staged purely and simply for one purpose—to alarm and arouse the American people," he declared in a prepared address.

Bradley was the main speaker at a "rally" session which featured the appearance of the party's two principal nominees, Mayor D. Boone Dawson, of Charleston, the gubernatorial aspirant, and State Senator Thomas Sweeney, of Wheeling, the senatorial nominee. National committeewoman Cara L. Ebert and State Chairman Robert H. C. Kay also spoke. The league will elect officers tomorrow and receive convention reports.

Bradley took issue with an early adjournment of congress, although the president said "he would not hesitate to call us back onto special session if some unusual defense requirement demanded it."

"How can you drive a team of horses when the horses are out in the field and the driver back in the barn?" he asked.

"Congress should remain in session, the American people demand it and I shall vote against adjournment of this session."

The Michigan Republican questioned the administration's proposal to let foreign nations have aircraft ahead of army and navy orders.

"I sincerely feel that in the interests of self preservation," he declared, "we are wholly justified in insisting that our foreign friends should be able to purchase aircraft in this country only when our own armed forces have been adequately supplied."

Pointing to recent testimony of high army officers that national defense needs are lacking, Bradley asked:

"Oh, Mr. President, what have you done with these billions we've given you. If you couldn't prepare our army in peace time, how can we trust you to prepare it in times of international crisis?"

Continuing:

"No, Mr. President, in this question of preparedness, you have been as woefully inefficient, as woefully extravagant, as woefully incapable as you have been in many other of your New Deal experiments of the past eight years."

He warned against "fifth column" dangers, but told the audience that the foreign situation should not "blind us" to domestic problems, unemployment, a farm question, social security and others.

All remain to be solved, he said.

Many Varieties Of Potatoes Are Grown in Garrett

3,855 Planted for Tests by Extension Service in Nearby County

GRANTSVILLE, May 31 — Cooperating with the United States Department of Agriculture, a wide variety of potatoes have been planted in Garrett county this spring. According to Dr. Robert A. Jehle, of the University of Maryland Extension service, the planting includes some 3855 different varieties, which are being studied to determine their resistance to blight, wilt, and other diseases, as well as for their yield and quality. Dakota Red, Irish Cobbler, Rural, Russet and Green Mountain are among the principal varieties which are most extensively grown in this section at present. Mr. Jehle said some of the new seedlings and new varieties showed more resistance to disease and promised a better yield and better cooking quality than some of those previously grown.

The state is endeavoring, through these tests, to increase its potato crop to a degree equal to the standard of other potato growing states.

South Charleston Bank Robbery Is Nearing Solution

Pictures of Men Now Held for $19,000 Hold-up Are Identified

CINCINNATI, May 31 (AP) — G-Men linked two accused bank bandits today to robberies totaling upwrad of $70,000 in three states, while a Hamilton county grand jury charged them in indictments with a $30,110 raid, Tuesday, on a branch of the Central Trust Co.

The men, Elmer Whitt, 30, of Columbus and Ivan Phillips, 33-year-old night club operator of Marion, O., were charged with entry into a bank to commit a felony; armed robbery of Herbert Jeffries, teller, and theft of an automobile in which they made a short-lived escape.

CHARLESTON W. Va., May 31.—(AP)—State police erased the one black mark against their bank robbery record today, confident that tentative identification of two men held at Cincinnati had solved the $19,000 daylight hold-up of the First National bank of South Charleston.

Superintendent C. C. Tallman announced that most of the employes and customers who were in the bank on November 18, 1939 declared that pictures of Elmer Whitt and Ivan Phillips were those of the men who ordered them to the floor and made off with bundles of cash.

Whitt, 30, of Columbus, and Phillips, 33, of Marion, O., are under indictment at Cincinnati on three counts for the $30,110 robbery of the Avondale branch of the Central Trust Company last Tuesday.

They were captured four hours after the robbery when a garage attendant noticed $2,000 lying on the floor of their car, and state officers, interested because of the tactics used, went to Cincinnati to interview them. Several employes and bank customers went to Cincinnati today in an attempt to establish personal identification.

Tallman said neither man would talk about the South Charleston robbery, but he described the two affairs as very similar.

The apprehension gave back to the troopers their record of no unsolved bank robberies in West Virginia, Tallman declared.

The biggest of recent years was the 1938 holdup of the same First National bank. Three men subsequently were captured, most of the loot recovered, and long prison terms imposed.

Because Ohio has a mandatory life sentence for bank robbery, Tallman said this state would not make a bid for custody of the two men at least until Ohio had completed its case.

Father and Son Banquet Is Held At Cresaptown

Dr. Landsberg, Formerly of Germany, Speaks to Eighty Guests

CRESAPTOWN, May 31.—Approximately eighty people attended the father and son banquet Wednesday night in the school cafeteria, sponsored by Cresaptown Troop 9 Boy Scouts.

Dr. Helmut Landsberg, former scout commissioner of Bavaria, Germany, spoke on "Scouting in Germany Before and After Hitler."

Landsberg spoke of his scout organizing in Bavaria and of the scout jamborees he attended. Thirty-five nations attended the jamborees but Italy, Russia, and Germany were not represented.

"Scouting is a full life for boys and helps them act like men," said Dr. Landsberg. "In 1933, scouts were taken from the scout tanks in Germany and taught the Hitler Youth Movement. I was then scout commander of 30,000 scouts, twenty-two years old, and was still a student. We had no background; fathers didn't care about their boys, nor what they did. When scouting was named a menace to the state by Hitler and his secret police, my accompaniments and I were chased rather rapidly from Germany."

Dr. Lansberg gave the Adolf Hitler pledge which is:

Adolf Hitler, thou art our leader;
They realm come, thy will be done in Germany as all over the world;
Thou givest us labor and bread;
Thou will free us from debt;
And will deliver us from Evil.

Father Alvin, of the St. Ambrose Catholic church, also spoke.

"Many young people have leisure time which they spend outside of school and church," he said. "It is very necessary that we find some occupation or hobby which will naturally keep us from being attracted by neighborly gangs and others outside. Boy scouting is a real training for boys in the church, school and community. Good scouting makes good American citizens. Gangsters go out the window when boy scouting comes in the door."

Other guests of honor at the banquet were: Myra N. Neffiin, principal of Cresaptown school; R. C. Lalor, E. T. Duke, and R. W. McGibbon, members of Potomac Council B. S. A.

Merit badges were presented by R. C. Lalor to James Grant for first class patrol leader, and William Todd for senior patrol leader.

The entire group sang "America" and "God Bless America".

Invocation was given by the Rev. W. W. Patterson and benediction by Father Alvin.

The troop committee is comprised of H. C. Heineman, chairman, J. L. Grant, Stanley Sorensen, and Edward Brookman.

Doctor Cautions Against Too Much Exercise

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

My Friend Dr. Adrian Gibbs tells me he said to his thirty thousandth patient the other day, "I am going to prescribe a somewhat peculiar form of treatment for you.

"I advise you to purchase a full length mirror. It should be one of those three-way affairs you find in clothing stores which are designed to make you see how you look with your clothes on. But I want you to use your mirror to see how you look with your clothes off. I have made you strip in order to examine you so I have an advantage over you. And I think that you should really know what you are like.

"Because my diagnosis of you is that you have an entirely wrong conception of what kind of a person you are. You are a banker and you tell me that you spent practically all the years of your life between the ages of twenty and forty sitting down. You enjoyed it and somehow you managed to accumulate quite a good deal of this world's goods. So with this addition to your family you decided, as the saying is, that you were going to enjoy yourself for a while. Somebody advised you to take up golf and you have been playing three times a week and twice on Sundays for the last five years.

"You were told that this would be good for your health, but you do not seem to connect the symptoms you now have with the change from a sitting position to a standing position.

"The reason I want you to look in the mirror is that I think you will immediately realize that you are a natural born sitting person.

Sitting Stomach

"Furthermore, your habits in other respects have changed since you took up the athletic life. You probably do not realize how adroitly I wormed out of you the kind of lunch you eat at the golf club on the days you regain your health. You eat a good club luncheon which is in quite a contrast to the one you ate when you were a practicing banker. Then you had a bowl of soup, or a glass of milk, perhaps a sandwich and an apple or other piece of fruit. You probably have not taken cognizance of the fact that your stomach is a sitting stomach also, made to fit your body. It is not prepared to take on a load of luxurious foods.

"You have surprised your stomach. You have played a practical joke on it, and nobody likes to have practical jokes played on them. I know a fellow once in a filling station who was a born practical joker—but I guess we haven't got time to go into his story. The point is he was unpopular with everybody around the filling station, and you are unpopular with your stomach.

"Mr. Pillblaud, exercise has killed more people than I have, and that is a very comprehensive statement.

"You probably are not enjoying what I am saying but after you have honestly looked at yourself naked in a mirror, you come back and we will talk it over some more."

Questions and Answers

L. C.: "Please tell me what causes a person to have a fever between ninty-nine and 100 when there is no lung infection or cold?"

Answer: The commonest cause is probably overactivity of the thyroid gland. I am assuming the statement is correct that there is no infection. Of course, undulant fever will do this, too.

National Open Offers Threesomes Choice

Pairings Reveal Crack Trios for Fans To Follow

U.S.G.A. Spots Stars To Attract Large Crowds to Cleveland

Play Starts Next Thursday --Sixty Low Scorers To Qualify

NEW YORK, May 30. (AP)—Spectators at the first two rounds of the national open golf tournament, to be held June 6-8 at the Canterbury Club near Cleveland, will have their pick of a choice collection of threesomes to follow, the pairings, announced today, reveal.

At 8:15 a. m. (Eastern Standard Time) next Thursday, the only twosome tees off. After that, threesomes will start the 72-hole grind at seven-minute intervals until the field of 170 is on its way. As usual, eighteen holes will be played each of the first two days, with the 60 low scorers and ties eligible for the final 36 holes Saturday.

Spot Stars

Anticipating the large galleries, the U. S. G. A. has spotted the more prominent threesomes at advantageous intervals.

The defending champion, Byron Nelson, is paired with Martin Pose of Argentina and Horton Smith. They will tee off the first day at 10:49 a. m. and the second day at 2:19 p. m.

Another threesome certain to attract a gallery includes Walter Hagen, Jimmy Thomson and Johnny Goodman. They are scheduled to start at 2:05 p. m. the first day and 10:35 a. m. the second.

Sam Snead, "71-hole champion" last year, is paired with Harry Cooper and Waldo Crowder of Warrensville, O.

Hogan To Get In

Ben Hogan, sensation of the Winter golf tour who failed to win more than an alternate berth in his qualifying test, probably will be in the field. Frank Strafaci, who qualified in Hogan's district, has offered to withdraw in favor of Hogan if there are no other withdrawals from that district. In that event Hogan probably would replace Strafaci in the pairings.

Starting times of other prominent threesomes include:

10:00-1:30 — Bobby Cruickshank, Jimmy Hines, Albert E. Campbell.

12:06-8:36—Toney Penna, Wilford Wehrle, Johnny Farrell.

12:34-9:04 — Lawson Little, Ed Dudley, Tony Manero.

1:02-9:32 — Jimmy Demaret, Aurelio Castanon, Al Espinosa.

1:30-10:00 — Ralph Guldahl, Jim Ferrier, Frank Walsh.

2:33-11:03—Bud Ward, Henry Picard, Olin Dutra.

City Softball Loop Gets New Member

Cumberland's new City Softball League met last night at the YMCA and discussed the contracts that are to be forwarded to the Maryland Amateur Softball Association of which the local league is an affiliate.

The question of whether City League players could play in the Rocking Chair League was decided in favor of the players now playing for the City Police team in the new recreation loop. The question was raised by one of the minor officials of the Elks' team of the same league and was disposed of by a reference to the Maryland ASA official rules for 1940.

The Comets of the City League were dropped by the League and President Cliff Fearer announced that a new team had been contacted and would replace the North End crew. The new team's name was not announced but President Fearer stated that he would make the name of the replacement known early next week.

Pen Mar Battles Slated This Afternoon

All games scheduled yesterday in the Pen-Mar Baseball League were postponed on account of rain and under the by-laws must be played on the next open date, which is tomorrow.

Yesterday's slate was Lonaconing at Centreville, Cumberland Merchants at Mt. Savage, Eckhart at Barton and Bard at Wellersburg. It was announced this morning by Secretary Howard Northcraft that Centerville had signed James Kienhofer, a shortstop.

Ken Overlin Calls Himself and All Contenders Bums

Says Walker and Greb Were Only Outstanding Class Champs

By JOHN LARDNER
Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

NEW YORK, May 31. — Mike Jacobs is a dictator, however benevolent, and Kenneth Overlin is a sailor accustomed to speaking his mind, which violates sections 1 and 2 of article VI of the dictator's handy guide to etiquette, to wit: "(1) Never speak your mind and (2) don't have a mind at all if you can avoid it."

This comes straight out of Hoyle, or, rather, out of Hitler, who is the Hoyle of the dictators' dodge and gets upward of 1,021 letters a week from striving young dictators all over the world asking for pointers on the rules and procedure.

Mr. Jacobs does not always go by the handbook, being an independent duce and a petunia-grower on the side, but he knows the fundamentals. Guys who are working for you should not speak out of turn. Therefore Michael is irritated no little by the blunt and unrehearsed conduct of the Sailory Mr. Overlin.

Talks Like Galento

Overlin is Mike's new middleweight champion of the world. He won the title from Ceferino Garcia last week, and when the boys asked him what he thought of the fight and of the situation generally, Mr. Overlin climbed down off the rigging and emitted the bronx salute.

"The fight was lousy," he said.

And Garcia?

"Garcia is a bum," said Mr. Overlin.

And the new champion?

"I am a bum, too," said the sailor frankly. "Listen, friends, a real middleweight champion like Mickey Walker or Harry Greb could take a couple of mugs like me and Garcia at the same time and wipe up the floor with us, I thank you."

With these words the honest salt swarmed up the mizzen to thumb his nose at whomsoever might be passing by.

I don't have to tell you that this sort of attitude sits ill with Mr. Jacobs. The duce—or the deuce, as he is known in the trade—may not think much of Mr. Overlin as a fighter, personally, but for better or worse the man is his middleweight champion, and the deuce does not care to hear Jacobs products knocked.

"What does Overlin know about fighters?" Demands the deuce, grinding his synthetic fangs.

"You consider him a poor judge?" says the interviewer.

"One of the worst," says Mr. Jacobs.

"But a great fighter?"

"Undoubtedly."

"And when he calls himself a bum—"

"He is leaping at conclusions," declares Mr. Jacobs. "Has he ever seen himself? No. He is going strictly by hearsay."

Influenced by Public Opinion

This sounds likely enough, for Overlin has doubtless heard himself called a bum many times and has let it go to his head. Better men than he have been influenced by public opinion. Described in reliable quarters as a bum, he smugly accepts the verdict and puts it on his letterhead. "Vanitas vanitatum," as the latin poet says. "Nuts!" As Mr. Jacobs says.

To tell the truth, I think Overlin is being a little hard on himself. The ancient mariner has fought more than a hundred fights and lost only seven, which seems to indicate a certain aptitude for his racket. What's more, who is he to call himself a bum among middleweight champions? I guess he never saw some of those middleweight champions?

I grant him that Mickey Walker and Harry Greb were tigers beyond his class. Also Stanley Ketchel and Bill Papke and Kid McCoy. But John Panica, alias Johnny Wilson, was no ball of fire, and neither was Michael Brian Boru O'Dowd, with whom Johnny used to fence for the title at the public's expense.

Little children had nothing to fear from Ben Jeby or Vince Dundee or Teddy Yarosz or Babe Risko. As a matter of fact, Mr. Overlin would have given any of those merchants a pretty good scramble, with no worse than an even chance of winning.

Out in Seattle, legend speaks of another world's middleweight champion now doing business, one mysterious Al Hostak, who may well be a better world's champion than Overlin. At least, the spook of Seattle is a hitter, which Overlin is anything but.

But what good does that do Mike Jacobs, the deuce? Hostak is not his champion. His champion is a light-hearted tar who goes around introducing himself to all who will listen as a bum, and the situation is beginning to get in the Deuce's teeth—I mean the Sunday set, with the chromium trimmings.

Briggs Turns Down Trades

Owner Walter O. Briggs, of the Tigers, is berating himself for two deals he could have made. He turned down a Rudy York-for-Cecil Travis trade early in 1940, and not so many years ago he refused to trade Schoolboy Rowe for Red Ruffing.

OUT OF RETIREMENT - - - - - - - - - - - By Jack Sords

By Central Press

GOSHEN, N. Y., May 31.—Out of competition for 18 months, Greyhound, world champion trotter, will stage a comeback this season when he faces another winner of the Hambletonian stake at Good Time park here, scene of the 14th renewal of the $40,000 harness derby in August, Peter Astra, Hambletonian victor last year, and four years younger than Greyhound, will battle the gray gelding on the first step of his comeback.

Although most champs necessarily wait until they are deposed before fighting back, Greyhound, owned by E. J. Baker, St. Charles, Ill., and driven by Sep Palin, Indianapolis, is believed ready to lick anything on four legs in competition.

To Race Aug. 12.

His last defeat was at Goshen in 1936 when Tara thrashed the son of Guy Abbey so badly that his owner withdrew him from the final and deciding heat.

"Doc" H. M. Parshall, Urbana, O., trainer and driver of Peter Astra, owned by Dr. L. M. Gullinger, Andover, O., believes that youth must be served and that Greyhound will be beaten. The two ex-Hambletonian winners have never met before and may never meet again.

Greyhound boasts the world record of 1:55¼, set against time, while Peter Astra earned a mark of 2:02¼ in a race last fall at Lexington, Ky.

The clash between the two crack trotters will kick off the annual grand Circuit meeting at Goshen on Aug. 12. Two days later, both horses, win or lose or draw, will have to content themselves with watching the current crop of three-year-olds fight it out in the Hambletonian stake to which they are no longer eligible. Kuno, owned by Dunbar W. Bostwick, Old Westbury, L. I., is now favored at 2 to 1.

Beaten Only Once

Greyhound, beaten only once since the Hambletonian of 1935, came too close to being thrashed by Rosalind, 1936 Hambletonian winner, when they met at Good Time track in 1938. Owner Baker got such a fright that last year his champion did not start once against competition, limiting his engagement to exhibition miles against the stop-watch.

Peter Astra, who chalked up a spectacular record of 2:02½ as a two-year-old in 1938, began to show his stuff of which he is made when he captured the "dress rehearsal" to the Hambletonian at Historic track here in July, 1930. One month later he won the Hambletonian stake in straight heats, giving his reinsman his second victory in the blue ribbon harness classic.

Shaw Captures 500-Mile Auto Race for Third Time

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

Indianapolis, May 31, (AP)—Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis, who looks like a man-about-town but who has made a small fortune in one of the world's toughest sports—automobile racing—today will collect approximately $30,000 as a reward for his third victory in an Indianapolis Motor Speedway grind.

Shaw won a history-making 500-mile race yesterday at an average speed of 114.277 miles an hour and joined Louis Meyer of Huntington Park, Calif., as the only three-time winners of the local classic.

He became the first man to win two consecutive races and won the first complete race finished under the yellow caution flag which requires all drivers to hold their places.

Officials hung out the caution flag at the 375-mile mark because of rain and left it there until the contest ended.

The Indianapolis pilot finished slightly less than 2½ miles ahead of Rex Mays of Glendale, Calif., and when Shaw crossed the finish line the race was called off. Mays, by finishing his last lap, actually drove the full 500 miles but speedway officials are expected to rule today as to whether he is to be credited with 500 or 497½ miles.

Before the rain the race was a battle between Shaw, who first started racing billy goats at his home town of Shelbyville, Ind., and Mays, who never until yesterday had been in at the finish of a 500-mile race.

Mays led for the first 85 miles, then Shaw moved in front. At 182 miles Shaw stopped for gas and tires and dropped to fifth place. Shaw regained the lead at 260 miles and never was headed.

Shaw drove the Italian Maserati with which he won last year's race. Mays piloted the American eight-cylinder job with which Meyer battled Shaw almost to the finish line in 1939.

The race was run without a single fatality although there were three spectacular accidents. At 77 miles Raul Riganti of Buenos Aires went through the fence at the southeast turn and his car overturned. He received cuts on his nose and a wrenched back.

Almost simultaneously, Tommy Hennershitz of Reading, Pa., went into a skid on the main straightway and crashed headon into the concrete retaining wall. His arm was broken.

A short time later Ralph Hepburn, Los Angeles veteran, spun on the main straight as he was pulling into the pitts. A fourth accident put Duke Nalon of Chicago out of the running, but he was uninjured.

Here's a Joke on You, Mr. Fisherman

By The (AP) Feature Service

EAST LANSING, Mich. — The fisherman who has stood in a swift-flowing stream for hours trying in vain to induce a trout to strike at a fly will probably shout: "It's a lie." Scientific research, though, shows that brook, brown and rainbow trout eat almost anything.

W. F. Morofsky, Michigan State college entomologist, has just completed a six year study of what food trout eat and during that time he has studied the contents of the stomachs of 1,548 trout collected by Michigan fishermen.

Study of 800 brook trout stomachs disclosed that 35 per cent of the food was caddice flies—known to fishermen as cinnomon flies, green tails and shell flies—and 81 per cent of the total food consisted of aquatic insects.

Brown trout stomachs were found to contain 44 per cent of may flies as the first choice. The caddice fly was second choice.

Small Pitching Quirks Give Batters the Tip-Off

Most sign stealing in baseball is fairly simple. Usually the pitcher or the catcher tips himself off by small peculiarities of movement. When Babe Ruth was a pitcher half of the league's hitters knew when he was going to throw his fast ball and when he was going to chuck his curve. When he reared back for his curve the Babe invariably stuck his tongue out of the side of his mouth, writes Shirley Povich in "The Washington Post." When he was throwing his fast one he was tight lipped. He was a brilliant pitcher despite this failing, however.

"We could always tell when Urban Shocker was going to throw us his spitball," relates Clyde Milan, the Senators' coach. "When Shocker was going to throw his spitter he'd never show us his tongue on the ball. When he was going to throw his dry pitch he'd try to cross us up by exposing his tongue."

Harris Defeats France

States Attorney Morgan C. Harris defeated Carroll France 1 up on the 19th hole in their first flight match in the Cumberland Country club annual Spring golf tournament yesterday.

In a second flight match William Douglas defeated A. B. Carlson 1 up on the 18th, and Elmo Gower won from H. W. Price 4 and 3.

Fighting Fox To Seek Revenge In Handicap Today

Woodward's Unpredictable Runner Races at Belmont

NEW YORK, May 31. (AP)—Fighting Fox, William Woodward's "yes-and-no" horse who won—and lost—in his last outing, comes back to the races tomorrow looking for revenge in the $5,000-added Roseben handicap, half of a Saturday "double feature" at Belmont park.

In the co-headliner, Starmount Stable's Damaged Goods, who turned in a smashing victory in the Acorn ten days ago, will try to prove that triumph wasn't a fluke by taking a crack at the 24th running of the mile and three-eighths coaching club American Oaks for three-year old fillies.

Fighting Fox, a five-year-old, has been just about as unpredictable a runner as you'll find around in his three years of racing. Despite his hot-and-cold performances, however, he collected $75,625 last year. So far this season, he wound up first in the six-furlong Paumonk handicap, packing 130 pounds, and the mile-and-sixteenth Excelsior handicap, carrying 128. He finished a clear length in front in the latter, but was disqualified because of a foul, and Maxwell Howard's The Chief took the winner's pot.

Centerville Takes 7-6 Tilt from Coney Nine

The Centerville nine pulled a run out of the fire in the thirteenth inning of their game with the Lonaconing team and won an exciting 7-6 victory over the Coney boys.

Evans started for the Coney team and lasted until the second when he was replaced by Corrigan who held the Centerville stickmen in hand until the thirteenth when they jumped on him for the winning run.

Rose, Centerville's boxman fanned seventeen men and pitched very good ball all the way through, being given nice support by his mates at the plate. Broadwater, was the leading hitter for the Coneymen with three for six while Alton Nave lead his team and all the hitters in the game with three for five

Pairings Reveal Crack Trios for Fans To Follow

Play Starts Next Thursday --Sixty Low Scorers To Qualify

NEW YORK, May 30. (AP)—Spectators at the first two rounds of the national open golf tournament, to be held June 6-8 at the Canterbury Club near Cleveland, will have their pick of a choice collection of threesomes to follow, the pairings, announced today, reveal.

At 8:15 a. m. (Eastern Standard Time) next Thursday, the only twosome tees off. After that, threesomes will start the 72-hole grind at seven-minute intervals until the field of 170 is on its way. As usual, eighteen holes will be played each of the first two days, with the 60 low scorers and ties eligible for the final 36 holes Saturday.

Spot Stars

Anticipating the large galleries, the U. S. G. A. has spotted the more prominent threesomes at advantageous intervals.

The defending champion, Byron Nelson, is paired with Martin Pose of Argentina and Horton Smith. They will tee off the first day at 10:49 a. m. and the second day at 2:19 p. m.

Another threesome certain to attract a gallery includes Walter Hagen, Jimmy Thomson and Johnny Goodman. They are scheduled to start at 2:05 p. m. the first day and 10:35 a. m. the second.

Sam Snead, "71-hole champion" last year, is paired with Harry Cooper and Waldo Crowder of Warrensville, O.

Hogan To Get In

Ben Hogan, sensation of the Winter golf tour who failed to win more than an alternate berth in his qualifying test, probably will be in the field. Frank Strafaci, who qualified in Hogan's district, has offered to withdraw in favor of Hogan if there are no other withdrawals from that district. In that event Hogan probably would replace Strafaci in the pairings.

Starting times of other prominent threesomes include:

8:43-12:13—Paul Runyan, Harold McSpaden, Frank Strafaci.

10:00-1:30 — Bobby Cruickshank, Jimmy Hines, Albert E. Campbell.

12:06-8:36—Toney Penna, Wilford Wehrle, Johnny Farrell.

12:34-9:04 — Lawson Little, Ed Dudley, Tony Manero.

1:02-9:32 — Jimmy Demaret, Aurelio Castanon, Al Espinosa.

1:30-10:00 — Ralph Guldahl, Jim Ferrier, Frank Walsh.

2:33-11:03—Bud Ward, Henry Picard, Olin Dutra.

City Softball Loop Gets New Member

Cumberland's new City Softball League met last night at the YMCA and discussed the contracts that are to be forwarded to the Maryland Amateur Softball Association of which the local league is an affiliate.

The question of whether City League players could play in the Rocking Chair League was decided in favor of the players now playing for the City Police team in the new recreation loop. The question was raised by one of the minor officials of the Elks' team of the same league and was disposed of by a reference to the Maryland ASA official rules for 1940.

The Comets of the City League were dropped by the League and President Cliff Fearer announced that a new team had been contacted and would replace the North End crew. The new team's name was not announced but President Fearer stated that he would make the name of the replacement known early next week.

Pen Mar Battles Slated This Afternoon

All games scheduled yesterday in the Pen-Mar Baseball League were postponed on account of rain and under the by-laws must be played on the next open date, which is tomorrow.

Yesterday's slate was Lonaconing at Centreville, Cumberland Merchants at Mt. Savage, Eckhart at Barton and Bard at Wellersburg. It was announced this morning by Secretary Howard Northcraft that Centerville had signed James Kienhofer, a shortstop.

Ken Overlin Calls Himself and All Contenders Bums

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

NEW YORK, May 31. — Mike Jacobs is a dictator, however benevolent, and Kenneth Overlin is a sailor accustomed to speaking his mind, which violates sections 1 and 2 of article VI of the dictator's handy guide to etiquette, to wit: "(1) Never speak your mind and (2) don't have a mind at all if you can avoid it."

This comes straight out of Hoyle, or, rather, out of Hitler, who is the Hoyle of the dictators' dodge and gets upward of 1,021 letters a week from striving young dictators all over the world asking for pointers on the rules and procedure.

Mr. Jacobs does not always go by the handbook, being an independent duce and a petunia-grower on the side, but he knows the fundamentals. Guys who are working for you should not speak out of turn. Therefore Michael is irritated no little by the blunt and unrehearsed conduct of the Sailory Mr. Overlin.

Talks Like Galento

Overlin is Mike's new middleweight champion of the world. He won the title from Ceferino Garcia last week, and when the boys asked him what he thought of the fight and of the situation generally, Mr. Overlin climbed down off the rigging and emitted the bronx salute.

"The fight was lousy," he said.

And Garcia?

"Garcia is a bum," said Mr. Overlin.

And the new champion?

"I am a bum, too," said the sailor frankly. "Listen, friends, a real middleweight champion like Mickey Walker or Harry Greb could take a couple of mugs like me and Garcia at the same time and wipe up the floor with us, I thank you."

With these words the honest salt swarmed up the mizzen to thumb his nose at whomsoever might be passing by.

I don't have to tell you that this sort of attitude sits ill with Mr. Jacobs. The duce—or the deuce, as he is known in the trade—may not think much of Mr. Overlin as a fighter, personally, but for better or worse the man is his middleweight champion, and the deuce does not care to hear Jacobs products knocked.

"What does Overlin know about fighters?" Demands the deuce, grinding his synthetic fangs.

"You consider him a poor judge?" says the interviewer.

"One of the worst," says Mr. Jacobs.

"But a great fighter?"

"Undoubtedly."

"And when he calls himself a bum—"

"He is leaping at conclusions," declares Mr. Jacobs. "Has he ever seen himself? No. He is going strictly by hearsay."

Influenced by Public Opinion

This sounds likely enough, for Overlin has doubtless heard himself called a bum many times and has let it go to his head. Better men than he have been influenced by public opinion. Described in reliable quarters as a bum, he smugly accepts the verdict and puts it on his letterhead. "Vanitas vanitatum," as the latin poet says. "Nuts!" As Mr. Jacobs says.

To tell the truth, I think Overlin is being a little hard on himself. The ancient mariner has fought more than a hundred fights and lost only seven, which seems to indicate a certain aptitude for his racket. What's more, who is he to call himself a bum among middleweight champions? I guess he never saw some of those middleweight champions?

I grant him that Mickey Walker and Harry Greb were tigers beyond his class. Also Stanley Ketchel and Bill Papke and Kid McCoy. But John Panica, alias Johnny Wilson, was no ball of fire, and neither was Michael Brian Boru O'Dowd, with whom Johnny used to fence for the title at the public's expense.

Little children had nothing to fear from Ben Jeby or Vince Dundee or Teddy Yarosz or Babe Risko. As a matter of fact, Mr. Overlin would have given any of those merchants a pretty good scramble, with no worse than an even chance of winning.

Out in Seattle, legend speaks of another world's middleweight champion now doing business, one mysterious Al Hostak, who may well be a better world's champion than Overlin. At least, the spook of Seattle is a hitter, which Overlin is anything but.

But what good does that do Mike Jacobs, the deuce? Hostak is not his champion. His champion is a light-hearted tar who goes around introducing himself to all who will listen as a bum, and the situation is beginning to get in the Deuce's teeth—I mean the Sunday set, with the chromium trimmings.

Briggs Turns Down Trades

Owner Walter O. Briggs, of the Tigers, is berating himself for two deals he could have made. He turned down a Rudy York-for-Cecil Travis trade early in 1940, and not so many years ago he refused to trade Schoolboy Rowe for Red Ruffing.

By Central Press

GOSHEN, N. Y., May 31.—Out of competition for 18 months, Greyhound, world champion trotter, will stage a comeback this season when he faces another winner of the Hambletonian stake at Good Time park here, scene of the 14th renewal of the $40,000 harness derby in August, Peter Astra. Hambletonian victor last year, and four years younger than Greyhound, will battle the gray gelding on the first step of his comeback.

Although most champs necessarily wait until they are deposed before fighting back, Greyhound, owned by E. J. Baker, St. Charles, Ill., and driven by Sep Palin, Indianapolis, is believed ready to lick anything on four legs in competition.

To Race Aug. 12.

His last defeat was at Goshen in 1936 when Tara thrashed the son of Guy Abbey so badly that his owner withdrew him from the final and deciding heat.

"Doc" H. M. Parshall, Urbana, O., trainer and driver of Peter Astra, owned by Dr. L. M. Guilinger, Andover, O., believes that youth must be served and that Greyhound will be beaten. The two ex-Hambletonian winners have never met before and may never meet again.

Greyhound boasts the world record of 1:55¼, set against time, while Peter Astra earned a mark of 2:02¼ in a race last fall at Lexington, Ky.

The clash between the two crack trotters will kick off the annual grand Circuit meeting at Goshen on Aug. 12. Two days later, both horses, win or lose or draw, will have to content themselves with watching the current crop of three-year-olds fight it out in the Hambletonian stake to which they are no longer eligible. Kuno, owned by Dunbar W. Bostwick, Old Westbury, L. I., is now favored at 2 to 1.

Beaten Only Once

Greyhound, beaten only once since the Hambletonian of 1935, came too close to being thrashed by Rosalind, 1936 Hambletonian winner, when they met at Good Time track in 1938. Owner Baker got such a fright that last year his champion did not start once against competition, limiting his engagement to exhibition miles against the stop-watch.

Peter Astra, who chalked up a spectacular record of 2:02½ as a two-year-old in 1938, began to show his stuff of which he is made when he captured the "dress rehearsal" to the Hambletonian at Historic track here in July, 1930. One month later he won the Hambletonian stake in straight heats, giving his reinsman his second victory in the blue ribbon harness classic.

Shaw Captures 500-Mile Auto Race for Third Time

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

Indianapolis, May 31, (AP)—Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis, who looks like a man-about-town but who has made a small fortune in one of the world's toughest sports—automobile racing—today will collect approximately $30,000 as a reward for his third victory in an Indianapolis Motor Speedway grind.

Shaw won a history-making 500-mile race yesterday at an average speed of 114.277 miles an hour and joined Louis Meyer of Huntington Park, Calif., as the only three-time winners of the local classic.

He became the first man to win two consecutive races and won the first complete race finished under the yellow caution flag which requires all drivers to hold their places.

Officials hung out the caution flag at the 375-mile mark because of rain and left it there until the contest ended.

The Indianapolis pilot finished slightly less than 2½ miles ahead of Rex Mays of Glendale, Calif., and when Shaw crossed the finish line the race was called off. Mays, by finishing his last lap, actually drove the full 500 miles but speedway officials are expected to rule today as to whether he is to be credited with 500 or 497½ miles.

Before the rain the race was a battle between Shaw, who first started racing billy goats at his home town of Shelbyville, Ind., and Mays, who never until yesterday had been in at the finish of a 500-mile race.

Mays led for the first 85 miles, then Shaw moved in front. At 182 miles Shaw stopped for gas and tires and dropped to fifth place. Shaw regained the lead at 260 miles and never was headed.

Shaw drove the Italian Maserati with which he won last year's race. Mays piloted the American eight-cylinder job with which Meyer battled Shaw almost to the finish line in 1939.

The race was run without a single fatality although there were three spectacular accidents. At 77 miles Raul Riganti of Buenos Aires went through the fence at the southeast turn and his car overturned. He received cuts on his nose and a wrenched back.

Almost simultaneously, Tommy Hennershitz of Reading, Pa., went into a skid on the main straightway and crashed headon into the concrete retaining wall. His arm was broken.

A short time later Ralph Hepburn, Los Angeles veteran, spun on the main straight as he was pulling into the pits. A fourth accident put Duke Nalon of Chicago out of the running, but he was uninjured.

Here's a Joke on You, Mr. Fisherman

By The (AP) Feature Service

EAST LANSING, Mich. — The fisherman who has stood in a swift-flowing stream for hours trying in vain to induce a trout to strike at a fly will probably shout: "It's a lie." Scientific research, though, shows that brook, brown and rainbow trout eat almost anything.

W. F. Morofsky, Michigan State college entomologist, has just completed a six year study of what food trout eat and during that time he has studied the contents of the stomachs of 1,548 trout collected by Michigan fishermen.

Study of 800 brook trout stomachs disclosed that 35 per cent of the food was caddice flies—known to fishermen as cinnomon flies, green tails and shell flies—and 81 per cent of the total food consisted of aquatic insects.

Brown trout stomachs were found to contain 44 per cent of may flies as the first choice. The caddice fly was second choice.

Small Pitching Quirks Give Batters the Tip-Off

Most sign stealing in baseball is fairly simple. Usually the pitcher or the catcher tips himself off by small peculiarities of movement. When Babe Ruth was a pitcher half of the league's hitters knew when he was going to throw his fast ball and when he was going to chuck his curve. When he reared back for his curve the Babe invariably stuck his tongue out of the side of his mouth, writes Shirley Povich in "The Washington Post." When he was throwing his fast one he was tight lipped. He was a brilliant pitcher despite this failing, however.

"We could always tell when Urban Shocker was going to throw us his spitball," relates Clyde Milan, the Senators' coach. "When Shocker was going to throw his spitter he'd never show us his tongue on the ball. When he was going to throw his dry pitch he'd try to cross us up by exposing his tongue."

Fighting Fox To Seek Revenge In Handicap Today

Woodward's Unpredictable Runner Races at Belmont

NEW YORK, May 31. (AP)—Fighting Fox, William Woodward's "yes-and-no" horse who won—and lost—in his last outing, comes back to the races tomorrow looking for revenge in the $5,000-added Roseben handicap, half of a Saturday "double feature" at Belmont park.

In the co-headliner, Starmount Stable's Damaged Goods, who turned in a smashing victory in the Acorn ten days ago, will try to prove that triumph wasn't a fluke by taking a crack at the 24th running of the mile and three-eighths coaching club American Oaks for three-year old fillies.

Fighting Fox, a five-year-old, has been just about as unpredictable a runner as you'll find around in his three years of racing. Despite his hot-and-cold performances, however, he collected $75,625 last year. So far this season, he wound up first in the six-furlong Paumonk handicap, packing 130 pounds, and the mile-and-sixteenth Excelsior handicap, carrying 128. He finished a clear length in front in the latter, but was disqualified because of a foul, and Maxwell Howard's The Chief took the winner's pot.

Centerville Takes 7-6 Tilt from Coney Nine

The Centerville nine pulled a run out of the fire in the thirteenth inning of their game with the Lonaconing team and won an exciting 7-6 victory over the Coney boys.

Evans started for the Coney team and lasted until the second when he was replaced by Corrigan who held the Centerville stickmen in hand until the thirteenth when they jumped on him for the winning run.

Rose, Centerville's boxman fanned seventeen men and pitched very good ball all the way through, being given nice support by

Rice Says Feller Is Another Lefty Grove

Grantland Rice Asks Yanks about Lonaconing Star

They Hear Around Boston That Southpaw Is Question Mark

Back in Form He Can Make Boston Real Flag Threat

By GRANTLAND RICE

The Yankees, recovering from their slump and driving once more toward the top of the American League, are looking closely at the Red Sox and the Indians. They never believed, even when they were in the depths of their slump, that they were going to wind up in the shadows. And now they figure it is only a question of days before they will be in front. Meanwhile—although holding every club in the league dangerous on any given occasion—they naturally expect the strongest resistance from the Red Sox and the Indians.

They are concerned with the pitching in Boston and Cleveland. As they see it, they will be aided by a continuance of the ineffectiveness of Old Mose Grove and menaced by the skill of Bob Feller. They even think—at least some of them that I talked to the other day—that these two pitchers, one near the end of the string as a big leaguer and the other just heading into the days of his greatness, may bring about a change in the positions of their two leading rivals.

As Joe McCarthy puts it, Feller is doing for the Indians what Grove used to do for the Red Sox but can do no longer, apparently: step in and halt their skidding with a well-pitched game when the other pitchers are faltering. So far, of course, the Red Sox have managed to do all right without Old Mose in the form he held through last year. But what of the months ahead—the hot months when the strain will be heavier on the other pitchers.

Grove Through at Last?

I asked some of the Yanks if they thought Old Mose was through—that after fifteen years of hurling, during which he slipped under the .500 mark only once, and that in his first year out of Baltimore—if the Lonaconing Limited really had lost his stuff. I asked them that, remembering that everybody thought he was through as far back as 1934 when he won only eight games in his first year in Boston.

They remembered that, too—and remembered how he came back with a rush—and what a pitcher he was right up to the end of last season. Only one of them answered.

"I don't know," he said, "but that's what we heard when we were in Boston. The dope we got was that while he might come through with a good game once in a while—might get out there any afternoon and blow that curve ball of his around the plate and then let go with a fast one now and then just to remind the hitters he still has it—he isn't going to be much real help to the club any more.

"If that's so, those other Boston pitchers had better be hot all season. Check back and you'll find that the fifteen games Grove won last year meant the difference between second place and fourth—at least."

The Yanks Admire Them

Incidentally, Grove and Feller, who may in one way or the other have such an effect not only on the fate of their own clubs but on the fate of the Yankees as well, are two of the Yanks' favorite athletes.

Naturally, they like to beat the two Bobs every time they hook up with them. But they admire Grove for his year-in and year-out performances, the courage he showed in beating his way back when everybody had him tagged for the cleaners and the skill with which he has made over his pitching style.

They Don't Like "Showboats"

They admire Feller not only for the natural stuff he has but for the way he has taken his fame in stride. There are no swelled-heads or show-offs among the Yankees and they freely hand it to the kid from Van Meter for having already touched greatness without making any fuss about it.

The Yanks, I might say, are critical of ball players they call "showboats." Not understanding Dizzy Dean, they took an almost violent dislike to him and got a terrific kick out of his crack-up in the all-star game in Washington in 1937 and the defeat they slapped on him in the World Series in 1938.

But Diz got them on his side after the final game of the 1938 series when he walked into their clubhouse at the Stadium and said he hated to lose but getting beaten by a great ball club took some of the sting out of the defeat.

Keller and Williams

The sophomore race in the American League between Charlie Keller and Ted Williams is warming up. Last year, as freshman outfielders, they were tops and finished close together, with Keller having the batting edge—.334 to .327. This year Williams broke fast and was off flying while Keller, along with the rest of the Yankees, found it difficult to get away from the post. Williams still is ahead by a wide margin—but it isn't as wide as it was a week ago, and Keller is moving up.

They are an interesting study, these two, especially as they are so unlike in temperament. Each loves to play ball and puts everything he has into his hitting, his running and his fielding. But Keller has to do it all the hard way and Williams makes it all look so easy.

THE CASE OF SAMMY SNEAD

What will happen to Sammy Snead, the West Virginia hillbilly, in the U. S. Open at Cleveland? Here is one of the strangest cases I know in competitive sport.

I happened to be at Bing Crosby's tournament at Del Mar, California, when the wiry Snead won his first big tournament. He had a swing you dream about. A short while later I saw Snead chase Ralph Guldahl to the final putt in the U. S. Open at Oakland Hills, near Detroit. We all figured then that Slammin' Sam couldn't be throttled much longer. He was on the way. That was in 1937.

A year later Snead broke all cash records for a year by winning something like $20,000 in one tournament after another. But he still missed the main spot—the U. S. Open.

This couldn't go on forever.

Bobby Jones had told me more than once that Sammy Snead had the best swing he had ever seen in his long career at golf.

"He has the ideal swing for practically every type of stroke," Bob said. "It is a swing of power and control. I've never seen a better one. He can get all the distance anyone wants with almost no effort, due to smoothness and perfect timing."

THE BIG CRASH

So when Sammy Snead came to the last two holes at Philadelphia a year ago with a 4 and 5 to win by two strokes, the West Virginian seemed to be safe enough.

"It's all over now," Walter Hagen told me. "These are two easy pars for a fourteen-handicap man."

After a terrific drive at the 17th, close to 300 yards, Snead only had a niblick shot left. His pitch was too strong, his short chip was weak and his putt for the hole was even weaker. So there was a 5.

A simple 4 on the last hole would still pull him safely through. But the 17th had wrecked his earlier confidence. He hooked his drive to the rough, then attempted to brassie to the green for another smothered hook into a trap. Failing to get out, his fourth shot was just short. His chip shot was bad and then he took 3 putts ghastly 8.

It was unbelievable for a great golfer—but it happened. Sam left the green looking exactly as if he had just stopped one of Joe Louis's best punches to the jaw. He was practically reeling.

He had taken thirteen strokes where a fourteen-handicap player could easily have used up only nine without cheering about it.

What happened? Snead merely lost all power of concentration at this spot and finished in a daze, as so many others have done in a big open.

THE SNEAD OF 1940

Snead has never quite recovered from that killing blow. He won the last big Miami tournament of 1939 with a brilliant 64 down to the stretch. Then he subsided again as Jimmy Demaret and Ben Hogan, the two Texans, took over the winter and spring show.

Snead was unable to hit his stride until finally he gave Ben Hogan a hard battle in the Goodall round-robin when he finished 19 up, 4 behind Hogan, the winner, and 12 ahead of Saraezn in third place. It was the best golf he has played in months.

But, after all, here is a great swinger who through four years has never won a big championship—the U. S. Open, the British Open, the P. G. A. and other headline tournaments that have extra class. So Snead now comes to Cleveland for his next stand on a long, narrow course that should give him a great chance.

THE MAIN TROUBLE

What has happened to Snead? I've talked with Sam about his game.

"I've had trouble concentrating through eighteen holes," he said, "much less 72 holes. If I keep on trying to concentrate too much I tighten up. I can play a few holes the way I want to play them, the way they should be played. Then I seem to get into a fog and something always happens. Few people seem to understand what a hard jolt it is to keep concentrating on every shot you play, and yet this is what you must do.

"Concentrating, I guess, comes easier to some golfers than it does with others. I know it doesn't come easy to me. You've got to play the golf course—and when you also have to play against yourself it makes a double job.

I've got no alibis. But this time I hope to make a better showing, whether I win or not. After all, there are a lot of great golfers in this field to beat, and only one man can win from over 1,100 starters, counting the qualifying rounds."

Snead undoubtedly is one of the most colorful golfers we have in the game today. The crowd rushes to see him hit a golf ball, to wonder at the big distance he gets with so little effort. He is a nervous fellow, extremely high-strung. With the temperament of a Walter Hagen he would have at least two big titles under his belt with a long way to go.

The question now will concern his ability to forget what happened at Philadelphia a year ago—to walk out from under the shadow that hung over his name for many months. He is still well overdue and his victory would be one of the most popular results of the year.—Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.

Georgetown Giant Only Athlete To Star in IC4A Meet

Al Blozis Breaks Two Meet Records As Storm Sweeps Stadium

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 31 (AP)—The northeast storm that usually welcomes the IC4A track and field delegations to the stadium discouraged all but Al Blozis, the Georgetown giant, who broke two meet records today, as 176 entries from 28 member colleges competed in 11 trial events.

That six foot four, 240-pounder repaid the slim crowd for its heroic attendance and attention by setting up the records in the shot put and discus, while Yale and Pennsylvania each emerged from the qualifying tests with nine survivors for tomorrow's championship events.

Pittsburgh finished third on the list with eight qualifiers, Pennsylvania State retained six, Cornell, Harvard and Manhattan five each and Georgetown and California four each.

Four colleges retained three competitors, Princeton, Brown, Maine and Tufts. Five others, Fordham, Boston College, Syracuse, Colgate and Rhode Island State had two holdovers and Michigan State, Rutgers and Temple each managed to get one qualifier.

As the steady rain appeared to be washing away the victory hopes of the small but highly favored University of California team, Blozis opened the 64th renewal of this intercollegiate classic by heaving the shot 53 feet 6½ inches, to erase the meet mark made in 1934 by John Lyman of Stanford by four and an eight inches.

Blozis then hastened from the stadium to the outside discus range to scale the platter 167 feet 4¾ inches, almost four feet farther than the previous best heave in the history of this competition.

Penn State's great negro star, Norwood Ewell, qualified easily in three events, as was expected, but the unfavorable conditions hampered him greatly. He led the 12 qualifiers for the 100-yard dash semi-finals by winning at 9.9 seconds heat.

County Track Meet Scheduled Today

Allegany county's annual high and junior high track and field meet and games tournament, postponed last Friday because of rain, will be staged at Fairgo today, Arthur G. Ramey, supervisor of pupils personnel and interscholastic athletics, announced this morning.

Ramey made the announcement after inspecting the track at Fairgo where today's events will be staged. Recent rains and last night's heavy downpour have left the track heavy, Ramey said, but unless the inclement weather continues conditions will be favorable for the program.

Games tournaments and field events will start at 9 o'clock this morning, while running events will get under way about 12:30.

Pittsburgh Pirates Buy Hitting Catcher

PITTSBURGH, May 31, (AP) — Pleased by the improvement their pitchers have shown, the Pirates today turned their attention to bolstering up the backstop department and put Eddie Fernandes on the payroll as a "hitting catcher."

The Bucs got an option on Fernandes from Portland, Ore., of the Pacific Coast League May 14, with the right to buy him by September 1 for delivery next season. They hired him today, however, by paying a "fixed sum" arranged previously, and sending Catcher Joe Schultz, Jr., to Portland in exchange.

The club hopes Fernandes, who is batting .333, will help supply the punch needed to raise it from the National League cellar. The 21-year-old Virginian played with the Butler, Pa., club in 1935.

Ball Teams Formed By Salvation Army

The South Cumberland branch of the Salvation Army is organizing two softball teams, according to Brigadier B. L. Phillipson. Theodore Nelson will have charge of the senior squad, composed of players 16 years of age and over, and Walter Hite will direct the junior team, comprised of boys 13 to 15.

The senior outfit will meet tonight at 6:30 at the Salvation Army hall on Virginia avenue and the juniors will meet at the same place tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. It is hoped at least 15 players will try out for each of the teams.

That Johnston Guy's Here With a Very Dark Secret

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

NEW YORK, May 31.—James J. Johnston, the boy bandit from Liverpool, has been most of his life a leading importer of pugilistic beef on the hoof. He began by importing himself, and since then has looted farms and freeholds in every part of the world from Omsk and Tomsk to the Transvaal.

A shipment from the Argentine, name of Valentin Campolo, is now being readied for a fight with Buddy Baer. But time does not stand still with Mr. Johnston, and while dressing the carcass of Campolo with his right hand he is arranging further shipments with his left.

"Don't breathe this to a soul," shouted Mr. Johnston to your correspondent the other day, "but I am about to import a genuine Irish heavyweight who will sweep the ranks of American fighters like a forest fire and wind up knocking Joe Louis stiff."

"Another Jack Doyle?" said your correspondent.

No Cheap Imitation

"Never say things like that!" snarled Mr. Johnston, adding lemon to his four o'clock cuppatea. "This is no cheap imitation Irish heavyweight. This is no lily-fingered songbird. This is no beauty-shop thrush like Doyle. This is a real Irish heavyweight who loves to fight."

"Another Phil Scott?" said your correspondent.

"I appreciate your sarcasm," said Mr. Johnston bitterly, draining his cuppatea to the dregs. "I will not waste further words on the subject. Just wait till you see my Irish heavyweight. He will scare you to death."

The boy bandit enjoys to the hilt the business of importing heavyweights. He never enjoyed himself more than in the days when he toured the country with Boer Rodal, a robust free Dutchman whom Mr. Johnston imported with little or no difficulty from the Union of South Africa at the time of the white hope panic.

Jack Johnson was the champion of the world, and every manager who could dig up carfare for two was out on the road with a white hope. Jess Willard was the principal white hope in 1913, but Mr. Johnston achieved a fine press for Boer Rodel. James was never at loss for words when interviewed.

On Rodel's arrival from South Africa, the late Robert Edgren, then a sports writer and cartoonist, asked for information.

"What has this Rodel ever done?" he inquired.

"He's a war hero!" snapped Johnston. "Did you ever hear of the Boer war? He was a hero at Kimberly, Ladysmith, and Mafeking."

This interview caused considerable comment when it appeared in print, for it developed that the three battles at which Mr. Rodel was a hero were fought almost simultaneously hundreds of miles apart, and that Mr. Rodel was 11 years old at the time.

Boer Made Famous

Nothing daunted, Mr. Johnston took to the road with his white hope. Skillful manipulation soon made the Boer famous, and they matched him with Jess Willard, who was going well. As a matter of fact, big Jess was going so well that he had just killed a man named Bull Young in the ring. This performance naturally caused a certain amount of resentful muttering here and there.

On the morning of the Willard-Rodel fight, Johnston sought out Willard and tapped him meaningly on the chest.

"Listen, Jess, I want to do you a favor," he said. "I want to warn you. Don't let this get any further, but I have just discovered that my Boer has a weak heart. The doctors don't give him a year to live. One stiff punch and he'll go"—Mr. Johnston snapped his fingers—"like that."

Mr. Johnston turned to depart, but paused in the doorway.

"You know, there's a certain amount of feeling about the way you killed Bull Young," he said. "I like you, Jess. I'd hate to see you hanging from a tree."

Willard's fight against Rodel was an epic of tender solicitude. Jess hit the Boer as seldom as he could, but every time he did graze him with a glove or push him a little too hard, he grabbed for Rodel and supported him and peered anxiously into his eyes.

"I think he even felt the Boer's pulse a couple of times," recalls Mr. Johnston. "Jess was very considerate."

Jess was less considerate later when he learned that Rodel was healthier than the average scrub oak tree. He knocked him out twice in the next two years. But the Boer could not complain about Mr. Johnston's management. Jimmy took him as far as he could go, and he'll do the same for every man he imports, Ukrainian, Kurd, or Tartar.

Devon Club, Oilers Take League Games

Westernport, May 31—The Devon Club remained in first place in the Tri-Towns Softball League by defeating the Wolverines Wednesday, 8-4. The Wolves scored four times in the first inning but went on a diet of goose eggs the rest of the way.

Jake's Oilers shut out the Eagles, 5-0, behind Lonnie Marsh's three-hit pitching. "Shorty" Farris poled two of the losers' blows while Bobby Cosgrove collected a pair of bingles for the Oilers. Connie Harvey of the Oilers starred afield. The scores:

Norfolk Woman Bowler Sets New World Record

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 31, (AP)—Ida Simmons of Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Margaret Lynn of Washington, teaming in the women's doubles of the Cumberland Valley Bowling Tournament, held a new record of 790; pins today.

Miss Simons rolled games of 145, 124 and 143, while Mrs. Lynn scored 134, 113 and 131, breaking the mark of 788 held by Caroline Hiser of Hyattsville, Md., and Katherine Vick of Norfolk.

Competing with the Rendezvous Alley team of Washington, Miss Simmons had team set of 416, and in singles rolled games of 148, 123, 103, and a 374 total.

Miss Simmons' doubles, singles and team match scores, boosting her total to 1202 pins in the women's all-events competition also gave her a world's record. The old record was set by Lucille Young of Washington.

Allegany Retains City Crown with Win over Ft. Hill

Coach Curry's Track and Field Team Cops Annual Meet

Coach Foy Curry' Allegeny High track and field squad retained the city championship by defeating the Fort Hill Sentinels in a dual meet completed on Thursday. The Campers gathered 82½ points to Fort Hill's 59½, to remain undefeated for the season.

Allegany, heavy pre-meet favorite, walked off with nine of the 13 events. The broad and high jumps were staged Wednesday at Allegany and the remaining contests Thursday at Fort Hill.

Two meet records were broken and another tied. Jim Gaffney, Allegany's versatile athlete, shattered the shot put mark with a heave of 45 feet, ten inches, and the Campobello sprint relay quartet set a new time of 46.2 seconds.

Gaffney bettered the shot record of 44 feet, four and one-half inches made by Ed Bratt of Fort Hill in 1937 while the Allegany sprint relay team clipped eight-tenths of a second off the former mark of 47 seconds made by Penn Avenue in 1934.

Rudd Ties Century Record

In taking the 100-yard dash, Tommy Rudd of Allegany tied the record of 10.2 seconds made by Fred "Tack" Clark of the West Side school back in 1931.

Gaffney, who won the 220-yard dash, shot put and javelin and placed second in the discus and 100-yard dash, was individual high scorer with 21 points. Vernon Miller of Allegany had 15 1-3 points while Stanley Norris led Fort Hill with ten tallies.

Allegany took a commanding lead Wednesday when it gathered ten and one-quarter points to Fort Hill's three-quarters of a point in the high jump and Miller captured the broad jump.

In the high jump Miller, Richards and Muma of Allegany tied for first with leaps of five feet, two inches and the tie was permitted to stand.

Morris, in pacing the Sentinels, surprised by beating Allegany's Joe Gulbronson in both the 880 and mile runs. Gulbronson, who was second in both these events, defeated Morris three times this season in the 880.

Hook Takes Discus

Miller, in addition to taking the broad jump and tying in the high jump, captured the 440-yard run and was third in the discus. Miles Snyder of Allegany won the pole vault with Minnicks and Fisher of Fort Hill tied for second.

Another upset occurred in the discus in which Gene Hook of Allegany defeated Gaffney. Hook's winning distance was 104 feet. Gaffney, Paul Durst, Miller and Rudd combined to break the sprint relay record.

Fort Hill captured the mile relay with Eddie Spear, Ellis Golden, Hook and Bill Davis covering the distance in 3:47. Fort Hill's No. 2 team was second.

Allegany was awarded the team trophy put up annually by the schools competing. The winning relay teams received trophies while medals for first and second places were awarded in the individual events. The summary:

Broad jump—Won by Miller, Allegany; Hook, Fort Hill, second; James, Allegany, third, and Richards, Allegany, fourth. Distance—19 feet, 11 inches.

GAMES SUNDAY
Westvaco at Frostburg.
Cumberland at Midland.
Keyser at Hyndman.

Cold weather and wet grounds blotted out Bi-State Baseball League games Thursday, but with clearing skies today the Keyser Moose outfit was hopeful of inaugurating its home campaign by entertaining Hyndman and the Westvaco A. A. has arranged to stage Thursday's postponed tussle with Frostburg American Legion at Memorial Park, Westernport, at the same time.

Thursday's Cumberland - Hyndman and Midland-Keyser engagements, which cannot be staged today because of the regularly scheduled Hyndman-Keyser game at Keyser, will be played on Saturday, June 15, or July 4.

Today's game will be the first of the season at Keyser, Moose moguls having arranged to play early games "on the road" because their new field has been under construction, and also the first meeting between Keyser and Hyndman.

Manager Joe Carbacio's Moose outfit has copped its last two battles after losing the first two starts, while Hyndman topped Frostburg 5-4 in its third engagement after losing its first two tussles.

Westvaco and Frostburg will also be meeting for the first time today.

Rice Says Feller Is Another Lefty Grove

Grantland Rice Asks Yanks about Lonaconing Star

They Hear Around Boston That Southpaw Is Question Mark

By GRANTLAND RICE

The Yankees, recovering from their slump and driving once more toward the top of the American League, are looking closely at the Red Sox and the Indians. They never believed, even when they were in the depths of their slump, that they were going to wind up in the shadows. And now they figure it is only a question of days before they will be in front. Meanwhile—although holding every club in the league dangerous on any given occasion—they naturally expect the strongest resistance from the Red Sox and the Indians.

They are concerned with the pitching in Boston and Cleveland. As they see it, they will be aided by a continuance of the ineffectiveness of Old Mose Grove and menaced by the skill of Bob Feller. They even think—at least some of them that I talked to the other day—that these two pitchers, one near the end of the string as a big leaguer and the other just heading into the days of his greatness, may bring about a change in the positions of their two leading rivals.

As Joe McCarthy puts it, Feller is doing for the Indians what Grove used to do for the Red Sox but can do no longer, apparently; step in and halt their skidding with a well-pitched game when the other pitchers are faltering. So far, of course, the Red Sox have managed to do all right without Old Mose in the form he held through last year. But what of the months ahead—the hot months when the strain will be heavier on the other pitchers.

Grove Through at Last?

I asked some of the Yanks if they thought Old Mose was through—that after fifteen years of hurling, during which he slipped under the 300 mark only once, and that in his first year out of Baltimore—if the Lonaconing Limited really had lost his stuff. I asked them that, remembering that everybody thought he was through as far back as 1934 when he won only eight games in his first year in Boston.

They remembered that, too—and remembered how he came back with a rush—and what a pitcher he was right up to the end of last season. Only one of them answered.

"I don't know," he said, "but that's what we heard when we were in Boston. The dope we got was that while he might come through with a good game once in a while—might get out there any afternoon and blow that curve ball of his around the plate and then let go with a fast one now and then just to remind the hitters he still has it—he isn't going to be much real help to the club any more.

"If that's so, those other Boston pitchers had better be hot all season. Check back and you'll find that the fifteen games Grove won last year meant the difference between second place and fourth—at least."

The Yanks Admire Them

Incidentally, Grove and Feller, who may in one way or the other have such an effect not only on the fate of their own clubs but on the fate of the Yankees as well, are two of the Yanks' favorite athletes.

Naturally, they like to beat the two Bobs every time they hook up with them. But they admire Grove for his year-in and year-out performances, the courage he showed in beating his way back when everybody had him tagged for the cleaners and the skill with which he has made over his pitching style.

They Don't Like "Showboats"

They admire Feller not only for the natural stuff he has but for the way he has taken his fame in stride. There are no swelled-heads or show-offs among the Yankees and they freely hand it to the kid from Van Meter for having already touched greatness without making any fuss about it.

The Yanks, I might say, are critical of ball players they call "showboats." Not understanding Dizzy Dean, they took an almost violent dislike to him and got a terrific kick out of his crack-up in the all-star game in Washington in 1937 and the defeat they slapped on him in the World Series in 1938.

But Diz got them on his side after the final game of the 1938 series when he walked into their clubhouse at the Stadium and said he hated to lose but getting beaten by a great ball club took some of the sting out of the defeat.

Keller and Williams

The sophomore race in the American League between Charlie Keller and Ted Williams is warming up. Last year, as freshman outfielders, they were tops and finished close together, with Keller having the batting edge—.334 to .327. This year Williams broke fast and was off flying while Keller, along with the rest of the Yankees, found it difficult to get away from the post. Williams still is ahead by a wide margin—but it isn't as wide as it was a week ago, and Keller is moving up.

They are an interesting study, these two, especially as they are so unlike in temperament. Each loves to play ball and puts everything he has into his hitting, his running and his fielding. But Keller has to do it all the hard way and Williams makes it all look so easy.

THE CASE OF SAMMY SNEAD

What will happen to Sammy Snead, the West Virginia hillbilly, in the U. S. Open at Cleveland? Here is one of the strangest cases I know in competitive sport.

I happened to be at Bing Crosby's tournament at Del Mar, California, when the wiry Snead won his first big tournament. He had a swing you dream about. A short while later I saw Snead chase Ralph Guldahl to the final putt in the U. S. Open at Oakland Hills, near Detroit. We all figured then that Slammin' Sam couldn't be throttled much longer. He was on the way. That was in 1937.

A year later Snead broke all cash records for a year by winning something like $20,000 in one tournament after another. But he still missed the main spot—the U. S. Open.

This couldn't go on forever.

Bobby Jones had told me more than once that Sammy Snead had the best swing he had ever seen in his long career at golf.

"He has the ideal swing for practically every type of stroke," Bob said. "It is a swing of power and control. I've never seen a better one. He can get all the distance anyone wants with almost no effort, due to smoothness and perfect timing."

THE BIG CRASH

So when Sammy Snead came to the last two holes at Philadelphia a year ago with a 4 and 5 to win by two strokes, the West Virginian seemed to be safe enough.

"It's all over now," Walter Hagen told me. "These are two easy pars for a fourteen-handicap man."

After a terrific drive at the 17th, close to 300 yards, Snead only had a niblick shot left. His pitch was too strong, his short chip was weak and his putt for the hole was even weaker. So there was a 5.

A simple 4 on the last hole would still pull him safely through. But the 17th had wrecked his earlier confidence. He hooked his drive to the rough, then attempted to brassie to the green for another smothered hook into a trap. Failing to get out, his fourth shot was just short. His chip shot was bad and then he took 3 putts ghastly 8.

It was unbelievable for a great golfer—but it happened. Sam left the green looking exactly as if he had just stopped one of Joe Louis's best punches to the jaw. He was practically reeling.

He had taken thirteen strokes where a fourteen-handicap player could easily have used up only nine without cheering about it.

What happened? Snead merely lost all power of concentration at this spot and finished in a daze, as so many others have done in a big open.

THE SNEAD OF 1940

Snead has never quite recovered from that killing blow. He won the last big Miami tournament of 1939 with a brilliant 64 down to the stretch. Then he subsided again as Jimmy Demaret and Ben Hogan, the two Texans, took over the winter and spring show.

Snead was unable to hit his stride until finally he gave Ben Hogan a hard battle in the Goodall round-robin when he finished 19 up, 4 behind Hogan, the winner, and 12 ahead of Saraezn in third place. It was the best golf he has played in months.

But, after all, here is a great swinger who through four years has never won a big championship—the U. S. Open, the British Open, the P. G. A. and other headline tournaments that have extra class. So Snead now comes to Cleveland for his next stand on a long, narrow course that should give him a great chance.

THE MAIN TROUBLE

What has happened to Snead? I've talked with Sam about his game.

"I've had trouble concentrating through eighteen holes," he said, "much less 72 holes. If I keep on trying to concentrate too much I tighten up. I can play a few holes the way I want to play them, the way they should be played. Then I seem to get into a fog and something always happens. Few people seem to understand what a hard jolt it is to keep concentrating on every shot you play, and yet this is what you must do.

"Concentrating, I guess, comes easier to some golfers than it does with others. I know it doesn't come easy to me. You've got to play the golf course—and when you also have to play against yourself it makes a double job.

I've got no alibis. But this time I hope to make a better showing, whether I win or not. After all, there are a lot of great golfers in this field to beat, and only one man can win from over 1,100 starters, counting the qualifying rounds."

Snead undoubtedly is one of the most colorful golfers we have in the game today. The crowd rushes to see him hit a golf ball, to wonder at the big distance he gets with so little effort. He is a nervous fellow, extremely high-strung. With the temperament of a Walter Hagen he would have at least two big titles under his belt with a long way to go.

The question now will concern his ability to forget what happened at Philadelphia a year ago—to walk out from under the shadow that hung over his name for many months. He is still well overdue and his victory would be one of the most popular results of the year.—Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.

Georgetown Giant Only Athlete To Star in IC4A Meet

Al Blozis Breaks Two Meet Records As Storm Sweeps Stadium

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 31 (AP)—The northeast storm that usually welcomes the IC4A track and field delegations to the stadium discouraged all but Al Blozis, the Georgetown giant, who broke two meet records today, as 176 entries from 28 member colleges competed in 11 trial events.

That six foot four, 240-pounder repaid the slim crowd for its heroic attendance and attention by setting up the records in the shot put and discus, while Yale and Pennsylvania each emerged from the qualifying tests with nine survivors for tomorrow's championship events.

Pittsburgh finished third on the list with eight qualifiers, Pennsylvania State retained six, Cornell, Harvard and Manhattan five each and Georgetown and California four each.

Four colleges retained three competitors, Princeton, Brown, Maine and Tufts. Five others, Fordham, Boston College, Syracuse, Colgate and Rhode Island State had two holdovers and Michigan State, Rutgers and Temple each managed to get one qualifier.

As the steady rain appeared to be washing away the victory hopes of the small but highly favored University of California team, Blozis opened the 64th renewal of this intercollegiate classic by heaving the shot 53 feet 6½ inches, to erase the meet mark made in 1934 by John Lyman of Stanford by four and an eight inches.

Blozis then hastened from the stadium to the outside discus range to scale the platter 167 feet 4¾ inches, almost four feet farther than the previous best heave in the history of this competition.

Penn State's great negro star, Norwood Ewell, qualified easily in three events, as was expected, but the unfavorable conditions hampered him greatly. He led the 12 qualifiers for the 100-yard dash semi-finals by winning at 9.9 seconds heat.

County Track Meet Scheduled Today

Allegany county's annual high and junior high track and field meet and games tournament, postponed last Friday because of rain, will be staged at Fairgo today, Arthur G. Ramey, supervisor of pupils personnel and interscholastic athletics, announced this morning.

Ramey made the announcement after inspecting the track at Fairgo where today's events will be staged. Recent rains and last night's heavy downpour have left the track heavy, Ramey said, but unless the inclement weather continues conditions will be favorable for the program.

Games tournaments and field events will start at 9 o'clock this morning, while running events will get under way about 12:30.

Pittsburgh Pirates Buy Hitting Catcher

PITTSBURGH, May 31. (AP)—Pleased by the improvement their pitchers have shown, the Pirates today turned their attention to bolstering up the backstop department and put Eddie Fernandes on the payroll as a "hitting catcher."

The Bucs got an option on Fernandes from Portland, Ore., of the Pacific Coast League May 14, with the right to buy him by September 1 for delivery next season. They hired him today, however, by paying a "fixed sum" arranged previously, and sending Catcher Joe Schultz, Jr., to Portland in exchange.

The club hopes Fernandes, who is batting .333, will help supply the punch needed to raise it from the National League cellar. The 21-year-old Virginian played with the Butler, Pa., club in 1935.

Ball Teams Formed By Salvation Army

The South Cumberland branch of the Salvation Army is organizing two softball teams, according to Brigadier B. L. Phillipson. Theodore Nelson will have charge of the senior squad, composed of players 16 years of age and over, and Walter Hite will direct the junior team, comprised of boys 13 to 15.

The senior outfit will meet tonight at 6:30 at the Salvation Army hall on Virginia avenue and the juniors will meet at the same place tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. It is hoped at least 15 players will try out for each of the teams.

That Johnston Guy's Here With a Very Dark Secret

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

NEW YORK, May 31.—James J. Johnston, the boy bandit from Liverpool, has been most of his life a leading importer of pugilistic beef on the hoof. He began by importing himself, and since then has looted farms and freeholds in every part of the world from Omsk and Tomsk to the Transvaal.

A shipment from the Argentine, name of Valentin Campolo, is now being readied for a fight with Buddy Baer. But time does not stand still with Mr. Johnston, and while dressing the carcass of Campolo with his right hand he is arranging further shipments with his left.

"Don't breathe this to a soul," shouted Mr. Johnston to your correspondent the other day, "but I am about to import a genuine Irish heavyweight who will sweep the ranks of American fighters like a forest fire and wind up knocking Joe Louis stiff."

"Another Jack Doyle?" said your correspondent.

No Cheap Imitation

"Never say things like that!" snarled Mr. Johnston, adding lemon to his four o'clock cuppatea. "This is no cheap imitation Irish heavyweight. This is no lily-fingered songbird. This is no beauty-shop thrush like Doyle. This is a real Irish heavyweight who loves to fight."

"Another Phil Scott?" said your correspondent.

"I appreciate your sarcasm," said Mr. Johnston bitterly, draining his cuppatea to the dregs. "I will not waste further words on the subject. Just wait till you see my Irish heavyweight. He will scare you to death."

The boy bandit enjoys to the hilt the business of importing heavyweights. He never enjoyed himself more than in the days when he toured the country with Boer Rodal, a robust free Dutchman whom Mr. Johnston imported with little or no difficulty from the Union of South Africa at the time of the white hope panic.

Jack Johnson was the champion of the world, and every manager who could dig up carfare for two was out on the road with a white hope. Jess Willard was the principal white hope in 1913, but Mr. Johnston achieved a fine press for Boer Rodel. James was never at loss for words when interviewed.

On Rodel's arrival from South Africa, the late Robert Edgren, then a sports writer and cartoonist, asked for information.

"What has this Rodel ever done?" he inquired.

"He's a war hero!" snapped Johnston. "Did you ever hear of the Boer war? He was a hero at Kimberly, Ladysmith, and Mafeking."

This interview caused considerable comment when it appeared in print, for it developed that the three battles at which Mr. Rodel was a hero were fought almost simultaneously hundreds of miles apart, and that Mr. Rodel was 11 years old at the time.

Boer Made Famous

Nothing daunted, Mr. Johnston took to the road with his white hope. Skillful manipulation soon made the Boer famous, and they matched him with Jess Willard, who was going well. As a matter of fact, big Jess was going so well that he had just killed a man named Bull Young in the ring. This performance naturally caused a certain amount of resentful muttering here and there.

On the morning of the Willard-Rodel fight, Johnston sought out Willard and tapped him meaningly on the chest.

"Listen, Jess, I want to do you a favor," he said. "I want to warn you. Don't let this get any further, but I have just discovered that my Boer has a weak heart. The doctors don't give him a year to live. One stiff punch and he'll go"—Mr. Johnston snapped his fingers—"like that."

Mr. Johnston turned to depart, but paused in the doorway.

"You know, there's a certain amount of feeling about the way you killed Bull Young," he said. "I like you, Jess. I'd hate to see you hanging from a tree."

Willard's fight against Rodel was an epic of tender solicitude. Jess hit the Boer as seldom as he could, but every time he did graze him with a glove or push him a little too hard, he grabbed for Rodel and supported him and peered anxiously into his eyes.

"I think he even felt the Boer's pulse a couple of times," recalls Mr. Johnston. "Jess was very considerate."

Jess was less considerate later when he learned that Rodel was healthier than the average scrub oak tree. He knocked him out twice in the next two years. But the Boer could not complain about Mr. Johnston's management. Jimmy took him as far as he could go, and he'll do the same for every man he imports, Ukrainian, Kurd, or Tartar.

Allegany Retains City Crown with Win over Ft. Hill

Coach Curry's Track and Field Team Cops Annual Meet

Coach Foy Curry's Allegeny High track and field squad retained the city championship by defeating the Fort Hill Sentinels in a dual meet completed on Thursday. The Campers gathered 82½ points to Fort Hill's 59½, to remain undefeated for the season.

Allegany, heavy pre-meet favorite, walked off with nine of the 13 events. The broad and high jumps were staged Wednesday at Allegany and the remaining contests Thursday at Fort Hill.

Two meet records were broken and another tied. Jim Gaffney, Allegany's versatile athlete, shattered the shot put mark with a heave of 45 feet, ten inches, and the Campobello sprint relay quartet set a new time of 46.2 seconds.

Gaffney bettered the shot record of 44 feet, four and one-half inches made by Ed Bratt of Fort Hill in 1937 while the Allegany sprint relay team clipped eight-tenths of a second off the former mark of 47 seconds made by Penn Avenue in 1934.

Rudd Ties Century Record

In taking the 100-yard dash, Tommy Rudd of Allegany tied the record of 10.2 seconds made by Fred "Tack" Clark of the West Side school back in 1931.

Gaffney, who won the 220-yard dash, shot put and javelin and placed second in the discus and 100-yard dash, was individual high scorer with 21 points. Vernon Miller of Allegany had 15 1-3 points while Stanley Morris led Fort Hill with ten tallies.

Allegany took a commanding lead Wednesday when it gathered ten and one-quarter points to Fort Hill's three-quarters of a point in the high jump and Miller captured the broad jump.

In the high jump, Miller, Richards and Muma of Allegany tied for first with leaps of five feet, two inches and the tie was permitted to stand.

Morris, in pacing the Sentinels, surprised by beating Allegany's Joe Gulbronson in both the 880 and mile runs. Gulbronson, who was second in both these events, defeated Morris three times this season in the 880.

Hook Takes Discus

Miller, in addition to taking the broad jump and tying in the high jump, captured the 440-yard run and was third in the discus. Miles Snyder of Allegany won the pole vault with Minnicks and Fisher of Fort Hill tied for second.

Another upset occurred in the discus in which Gene Hook of Allegany defeated Gaffney. Hook's winning distance was 104 feet. Gaffney, Paul Durst, Miller and Rudd combined to break the sprint relay record.

Fort Hill captured the mile relay with Eddie Spear, Ellis Golden, Hook and Bill Davis covering the distance in 3:47. Fort Hill's No. 2 team was second.

Allegany was awarded the team trophy put up annually by the schools competing. The winning relay teams received trophies while medals for first and second places were awarded in the individual events. The summary:

Broad jump—Won by Miller, Allegany; Hook, Fort Hill, second; James, Allegany, third; and Richards, Allegany, fourth. Distance—19 feet, 2 inches.

Norfolk Woman Bowler Sets New World Record

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 31. (AP)—Ida Simmons of Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Margaret Lynn of Washington, teaming in the women's doubles of the Cumberland Valley Bowling Tournament, held a new record of 790, pins today.

Miss Simons rolled games of 145, 124 and 143, while Mrs. Lynn scored 134, 113 and 131, breaking the mark of 788 held by Caroline Hiser of Hyattsville, Md., and Katherine Vick of Norfolk.

Competing with the Rendezvous Alley team of Washington, Miss Simmons had team set of 416 and in singles rolled games of 148, 123, 103, and a 374 total.

Miss Simmons' doubles, singles and team match scores, boosting her total to 1202 pins in the women's all-events competition also gave her a world's record. The old record was set by Lucille Young of Washington.

GAMES TODAY
Hyndman at Keyser.
Frostburg at Westvaco.

Westvaco at Frostburg.
Cumberland at Midland.
Keyser at Hyndman.

Cold weather and wet grounds blotted out Bi-State Baseball League games Thursday, but with clearing skies today the Keyser Moose outfit was hopeful of inaugurating its home campaign by entertaining Hyndman and the Westvaco A. A. has arranged to stage Thursday's postponed tussle with Frostburg American Legion at Memorial Park, Westernport, at the same time.

Thursday's Cumberland - Hyndman and Midland-Keyser engagements, which cannot be staged today because of the regularly scheduled Hyndman-Keyser game at Keyser, will be played on Saturday, June 15, or July 4.

Today's game will be the first of the season at Keyser, Moose moguls having arranged to play early games "on the road" because their new field has been under construction, and also the first meeting between Keyser and Hyndman.

Manager Joe Carbacio's Moose outfit has copped its last two battles after losing the first two starts, while Hyndman topped Frostburg 5-4 in its third engagement after losing its first two tussles.

Westvaco and Frostburg will also be meeting for the first time today.

War Stocks Advance Slightly in Dull Market; Aircrafts in Lead

Steels and Specialties also Make Good Showing

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, May 31 (AP)—Prospective war beneficiaries moved up in today's stock market but many issues failed to get going.

Gains ran to two or more points for steels, aircrafts and specialties in the forenoon. Closing quotations were well under the best.

Transfers were 526,760 shares the smallest for a full day since May 6, and compared with 657,082 last Wednesday.

Traders found scant inspiration in European war news but action of the president in asking congress for a supplemental appropriation of "over a billion dollars" for emergency defense purposes brought a slight touch of inflationary psychology to boardrooms.

Stocks ahead at the finish included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Anaconda, American Telephone, du Pont, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, N. Y. Shipbuilding, Electric Boat, Loew's, Texas Corp., and Sears Roebuck.

In arrears were Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Standard Oil of N. J., Kennecott, U. S. Gypsum, Consolidated Edison and Montgomery Ward.

Gainers of fractions to two or more in the Curb were Aluminum of America, Mead Johnson, Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, Sherwin Williams and Pittsburgh Plate glass. Niles-Bement-Pond climbed 5¾. The turnover here was around 70,000 shares against 123,000 Wednesday.

Chicago Grain Prices

CHICAGO, May 31 (AP)—Wheat prices fell as much as two cents a bushel today in an outburst of post-holiday liquidation based on war developments, expectations that forthcoming private crop reports may raise estimates of domestic wheat production, and uncertainty about trade regulations affecting futures quotations.

Wheat closed at the day's bottom, almost 3 cents below early highs and 1½-2⅛ cents lower than Wednesday, with July 81½-⅜, September 81⅜-¾. Corn dropped more than 2 cents from early highs and closed 1⅛-1½ lower than Wednesday, July 61½-⅜, September 60½.

Fire Valley Used for Authentic Film Scenes

Fire valley is a place that time forgot. That's the reason Hal Roach selected it as the spot for making much of his motion picture, "One Million B. C.," current United Artists release at the Maryland theater.

The film, as the title suggests, has to do with early man and the dawn of civilization. Roach wanted authentic, prehistoric surroundings. He couldn't have found a more suitable place than Fire valley. It begins a few miles out of Logandale, Nev., and stretches some twenty miles. Of bright red sandstone, it looks like a bloody gash in the rock-strewn hills.

Fire valley has few visitors. There isn't much reason for going into it, unless you're a fossil-hunter—or a film producer. The wind is the valley's most intimate companion and it had done strange things to the sandstone formation, achieving grotesque monuments of sculpture.

Erosino has, over the span of centuries, created caves, gargoyles, pillars and labrynths. Sandstone is extremely plastic, a good subject for the artistry of the elements. In the memory of white men, a few Piute Indians inhabited Fire valley.

Immortal South Sea Story Is Pictured

"Swiss Family Robinson," picturization of the intensely human story that has been beloved by generations of readers is showing at the New Liberty theater. It deals with the adventures of a family wrecked on a South Sea island, and with their regeneration after a struggle with nature in the raw.

Much of the action of "Swiss Family Robinson" takes place against the picturesque background of a tropic island with its barrier reef, lagoons and a sparkling river, and covered with a vast forest of huge palms, magnolias, pandanus, tamarinds and other native trees. Among these trees fly hundreds of gaily-colored macaws, ibis, swans, cranes, birds of paradise, cockatoos and other tropic fowl, while deer and monkeys throng in the underbrush. One of the most unique settings of the picture is the amazing tree-house constructed in a giant tamarind.

New Double Bill Is Scheduled by Embassy

Deanna Durbin will be presented in the singing hit, "Three Smart Girls Grow Up", with Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Robert Cummings and Charles Winninger in the supporting cast.

The second feature will be John Litel and Rochelle Hudson in the action drama, "Men without Souls".

Closing today at the Embassy will be the double feature attraction consisting of the cowboy star, Gene Autry, in the singing western, "Gaucho Serenade", with Smiley Burnette, and Sabu in "Elephant Boy".

In addition to the two features the eighth chapter of the serial, "The Shadow", will be presented.

BEAUTIES IN TABLEAUX

The Miss America tableau revue done in the Ziegfeld manner is an outstanding feature on the Cetlin and Wilson World on Parade midway, which has 15 final appearances in Cumberland tonight at Community baseball park.

HEADS ENTERTAINERS

IN MARYLAND FEATURE

A scene in "Florian," tale of the pomp of old Austria and the fall of the empire told through the eyes of a royal stallion for whom a man and a woman ransack the world, which will be presented Monday on the screen of the Maryland theater.

Stage Revue Will Be At Strand Today

Along with the boys of the band, Olsen will have his newest addition to his band with him, the Harrison Sisters, three young ladies whose style of vocalizing blends well with the Olsen style. Also on the bill are Jean Blair, the sweet soprano songstress, the Four Bachelors, Bonnie Mansfield and the famous Olsen ensemble.

The screen attraction will be "Ski Patrol," an action drama with white-clad ski troops battling parachute machine gunners and other modern war forces. Mine explosions, machine gun raids, parachuters' assaults, ski battle maneuvers and other thrilling action is provided in the film. In the cast are Samuel S. Hinds, Stanley Fields, Edward Norris, Hardie Albright, Kathryn Adams, John Qualen, John Arledge, John Ellis, Henry Brandon and Christian Rub.

James Street's Saturday Evening Post story, "The Biscuit Eater," a tale of southern country life, has been made into a motion picture and is half the twin program opening tomorrow. The story deals with a boy and his dog and includes some fine shots of bird dogs actually working. The cast is headed by Billy Lee, Cordell Hickman, Helene Millard, Richard Lane, Lester Matthews and "Snowflake."

Foster Has Forty-ninth Role in Garden Film

Preston Foster made his forty-ninth screen role in Universal's "Missing Evidence," now at the Garden theater.

Irene Hervey shares romantic honors in the film, which features Chick Chandler, Inez Courtney, Noel Madison and Joe Downing in supporting roles.

"Missing Evidence" is said to be a vivid picturization of the counterfeit sweepstakes ticket racket, how the swindle is practiced and how the Government deals with the perpetrators.

Also on the Garden program is "Heart of the North," featuring Dick Foran, Gale Page, Gloria Dickson and Allen Jenkins. The picture is filmed in technicolor.

Chicago Grain Prices

CHICAGO, May 31 (AP)—Wheat prices fell as much as two cents a bushel today in an outburst of post-holiday liquidation based on war developments, expectations that forthcoming private crop reports may raise estimates of domestic wheat production, and uncertainty about trade regulations affecting futures quotations.

Wheat closed at the day's bottom, almost 3 cents below early highs and 1⅛-2⅛ cents lower than Wednesday, with July 81½-⅜, September 81⅞-¾. Corn dropped more than 2 cents from early highs and closed 1⅛-1½ lower than Wednesday, July 61¼-⅜, September 60½.

Fire Valley Used for Authentic Film Scenes

Fire valley is a place that time forgot. That's the reason Hal Roach selected it as the spot for making much of his motion picture, "One Million B. C.," current United Artists release at the Maryland theater.

The film, as the title suggests, has to do with early man and the dawn of civilization. Roach wanted authentic, prehistoric surroundings. He couldn't have found a more suitable place than Fire valley. It begins a few miles out of Logandale, Nev., and stretches some twenty miles. Of bright red sandstone, it looks like a bloody gash in the rock-strewn hills.

Fire valley has few visitors. There isn't much reason for going into it, unless you're a fossil-hunter—or a film producer. The wind is the valley's most intimate companion and it had done strange things to the sandstone formation, achieving grotesque monuments of sculpture.

Erosino has, over the span of centuries, created caves, gargoyles, pillars and labrynths. Sandstone is extremely plastic, a good subject for the artistry of the elements. In the memory of white men, a few Piute Indians inhabited Fire valley.

Much of the action of "Swiss Family Robinson" takes place against the picturesque background of a tropic island with its barrier reef, lagoons and a sparkling river, and covered with a vast forest of huge palms, magnolias, pandanus, tamarinds and other native trees. Among these trees fly hundreds of gaily-colored macaws, ibis, swans, cranes, birds of paradise, cockatoos and other tropic fowl, while deer and monkeys throng in the underbrush. One of the most unique settings of the picture is the amazing tree-house constructed in a giant tamarind.

New Double Bill Is Scheduled by Embassy

The Embassy theater will have another double feature attraction tomorrow.

Deanna Durbin will be presented in the singing hit, "Three Smart Girls Grow Up", with Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Robert Cummings and Charles Winninger in the supporting cast.

The second feature will be John Litel and Rochelle Hudson in the action drama, "Men without Souls".

Closing today at the Embassy will be the double feature attraction consisting of the cowboy star, Gene Autry, in the singing western, "Gaucho Serenade", with Smiley Burnette, and Sabu in "Elephant Boy".

In addition to the two features the eighth chapter of the serial, "The Shadow", will be presented.

BEAUTIES IN TABLEAUX

HEADS ENTERTAINERS

IN MARYLAND FEATURE

A scene in "Florian," tale of the pomp of old Austria and the fall of the empire told through the eyes of a royal stallion for whom a man and a woman ransack the world, which will be presented Monday on the screen of the Maryland theater.

Stage Revue Will Be At Strand Today

Along with the boys of the band, Olsen will have his newest addition to his band with him, the Harrison Sisters, three young ladies whose style of vocalizing blends well with the Olsen style. Also on the bill are Jean Blair, the sweet soprano songstress, the Four Bachelors, Bonnie Mansfield and the famous Olsen ensemble.

The screen attraction will be "Ski Patrol," an action drama with white-clad ski troops battling parachute machine gunners and other modern war forces. Mine explosions, machine gun raids, parachuters' assaults, ski battle maneuvers and other thrilling action is provided in the film. In the cast are Samuel S. Hinds, Stanley Fields, Edward Norris, Hardie Albright, Kathryn Adams, John Qualen, John Arledge, John Ellis, Henry Brandon and Christian Rub.

James Street's Saturday Evening Post story, "The Biscuit Eater," a tale of southern country life, has been made into a motion picture and is half the twin program opening tomorrow. The story deals with a boy and his dog and includes some fine shots of bird dogs actually working. The cast is headed by Billy Lee, Cordell Hickman, Helene Millard, Richard Lane, Lester Matthews and "Snowflake."

Foster Has Forty-ninth Role in Garden Film

Preston Foster made his forty-ninth screen role in Universal's "Missing Evidence," now at the Garden theater.

Irene Hervey shares romantic honors in the film, which features Chick Chandler, Inez Courtney, Noel Madison and Joe Downing in supporting roles.

"Missing Evidence" is said to be a vivid picturization of the counterfeit sweepstakes ticket racket, how the swindle is practiced and how the Government deals with the perpetrators.

Also on the Garden program is "Heart of the North," featuring Dick Foran, Gale Page, Gloria Dickson and Allen Jenkins. The picture is filmed in technicolor.

In loving memory of my husband, George M. Twigg, who died May 31st, 1939.

When evening shades are fading,

To those who have a husband,
Tender him with care,
For you never know his value,
Until you see his vacant chair.

In Memoriams

In loving memory of my husband, George M. Twigg, who died May 31st, 1939.

When evening shades are fading,
I am sitting all alone,
In my heart there comes a longing,
If you could only come home.
To those who have a husband,
Tender him with care,
For you never know his value,
Until you see his vacant chair.

His loving wife,
MARGARET TWIGG.

Tom Richards Sent to Prison For One Year

Bids Judge Farewell After Sobbing On Witness Stand

Thomas P. Richards, former clerk to the board of county commissioners, was sentenced to a year in the House of Correction yesterday afternoon in Trial Magistrates court.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. imposed the sentence after refusing Richard's plea that he be allowed to go to a veterans hospital for "rehabilitation."

Richards was convicted of assaulting his wife.

Mrs. Richards Testifies

Mrs. Richards, controlling her emotions only with great difficulty, took the stand to tell how her husband beat her and choked her in their home on Gephart drive on April 15, after having threatened to kill her.

Her story was supplemented by testimony of Mrs. E. O. Fritch, a neighbor; Dr. and Mrs. A. N. Golladay, to whose home Mrs. Richards went after the incident; Dr. C. L. Owens; and the arresting officers.

Pleads Not Guilty

Richards pleaded not guilty, but did not challenge the testimony of his wife.

Richards had no attorney, but his sister, Mrs. Louis D. Young, rose to make an impromptu and impassioned plea for clemency for him.

At several points in his testimony, Richards broke down in sobs.

Yet when it was all over, in a gesture characteristic of the man who won so many friends during his many years as a public office holder, Richards thanked Magistrate Bruce and bade him goodbye.

Taken to County Jail

Richards was taken to the county jail to await his transfer to the House of Correction.

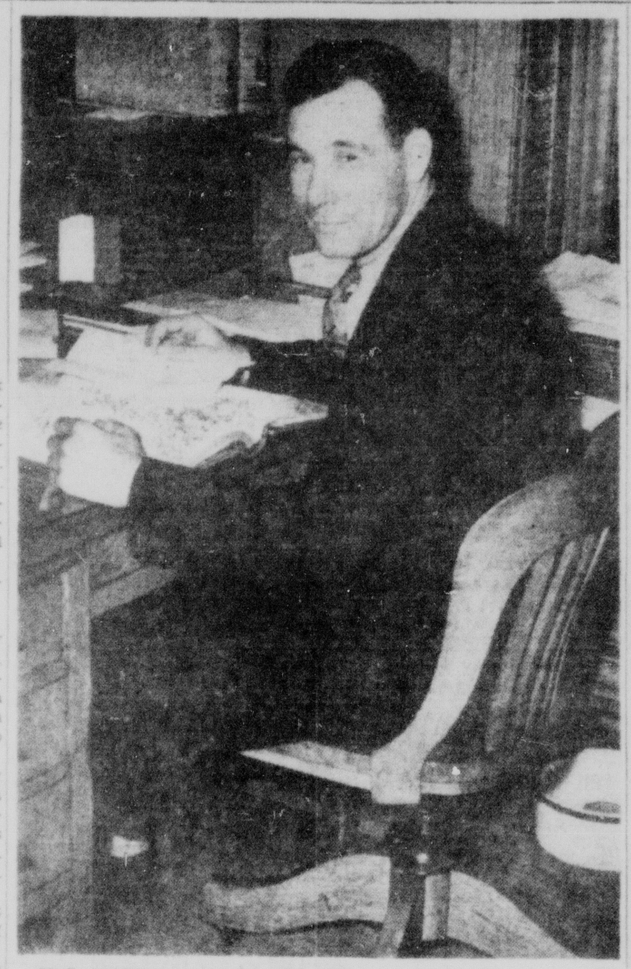
Richards was originally charged with assault with intent to kill, but he was given to understand that the charge would not be pressed if he left the county and stayed away.

He was brought to trial yesterday, however, when he was arrested here Tuesday allegedly in an intoxicated condition.

Charge Reduced

The charge was changed to simple assault yesterday. A simple assault charge can be disposed of in the magistrates court, while a charge of assault with intent to kill must go before the grand jjury and Circuit court.

Attorney Charles Z. Heskett represented Mrs. Richards at the hearing. State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris was not present, but his office was represented by Terrence J. Boyle, county investigator.



IN NEW LEAGUE—James "Scotty" Stevenson, well-known amateur baseball pitcher and bus driver, tries to push his long legs under the desk he will occupy as new clerk to the board of Allegany county commissioners. See story below.—New Staff Photo.

'Scotty' Stevenson To Make Debut In 'Court House League' Tuesday

James "Scotty" Stevenson, an amateur baseball pitcher of note in these parts since 1933, will make his official debut in a new league next Tuesday, and it won't be tossing baseballs this time.

"Big Jim" is scheduled to take the oath of office as the new clerk to the board of Allegany county commissioners Tuesday, and thereafter he will become a member of the team of Green, Holmes and Stakem, which now holds first place in the Court House League.

Appointment Surprise

Stevenson, a native of Carlos, fell heir to the clerkship when R. Mason Hill resigned that post to become assistant clerk in charge of assessments. His appointment to the position of clerk came as a big surprise as even his closest friends were unaware that he was an applicant for the job.

For the past eight years, Stevenson has been a bus driver for the Potomac Edison Company and over that long stretch he has not had a single "responsible" accident. He holds a seven-year pin awarded him by the company for being a "no accident driver" and he hopes to obtain an eight-year pin before he resigns his job after driving a P. E. bus for the final time tomorrow.

"Scotty" first came into the baseball limelight in 1933 as ace hurler for the Cumberland Eagles, champions of the Interstate League. In 1934 and 1935 he enjoyed his best seasons as a member of the Potomac Edison nine. It was during those two seasons that he compiled a winning streak that still stands as a record for local amateur twirlers to shoot at. He racked up eighteen consecutive wins, twelve late in 1934 and six in a row in 1935 before he was halted by the Celanese A. A. in a game stopped by rain in the first half of the eighth inning with his team leading 6 to 3. When the score reverted to the seventh inning, Celanese was the winner by a 3 to 2 score.

Pitched Longest Game

In 1936, Stevenson, pitching for Frostburg, marked up ten consecutive wins in the George's Creek League. He also pitched in one of the longest games on record here when he lost a 19-inning thriller to Grant Town, W. Va., late in 1936, while working on the mound for the local American Legion semi-professional aggregation.

The big right-hander is now a member of the Hyndman Club, of the Bi-State League, and in the role of relief pitcher recently, he won his own game by knocking a two-bagger in the eighth inning to defeat Frostburg, 5 to 4.

"Scotty" is a son of George and Lillian Stevenson, of Carlos. His dad is employed in the filtration department of the Celanese Corporation of America plant. He has two married sisters, Mrs. Edith Hutcheson and Mrs. Elizabeth Winters, both of Carlos, and incidentally both the wives of well-known baseball pitchers, namely, Arch Hutcheson and Jim Winters.

Married, Two Children

The clerk is 32 years old, is married and has two children, George and Jimmy. His wife is the former Miss Laura Holler, of Cumberland. The Stevensons live at Ellerslie.

His uncle, James T. Stevenson, who now resides on Grand avenue, was elected to the Maryland House of Delegates for two terms. The former legislator's son, Bill, is also a pitcher of note, at present being a member of the Cumberland Colts of the Bi-State League.

"I believe the only member of the family not pitching today is my grandfather, George Adams, 89, who is now living in Carlos," Stevenson laughingly remarked.

Dennis Crabtree, senior president of the Bethany Society, led the devotions.

South Branch Floods Farms, Blocks Road

Main Highway Open Again; Corn Damaged

Flood waters of the South Branch of the Potomac rolled over many acres of rich farmland yesterday doing damage in many places to young crops, especially corn.

Low-lying fields the length of the valley were flooded, and highway traffic on U. S. 220 was cut off near Moorefield during the most of the day.

State Police reported that water was three-feet deep over the highway for a half mile stretch north of Moorefield. The road was closed from early morning until 3 p. m.

The South Fork flooded the same highway just south of the city limits.

The highway was closed for a short time, too, by more than a foot of water in the road in Petersburg Gap, between Moorefield and Petersburg.

Extent of the damage could not be checked yesterday, however, as the muddy waters still swirled through the fields.

Drunken Driving Case Appealed

Salesman Fined $103 After Hitting Tree

A 33-year-old vaccum cleaner salesman filed notice of an appeal to Circuit court yesterday in Trial Magistrate court after he was found guilty on charges of drunken and reckless driving.

The driver, Shirley O. Struckman, of 810 Maryland aveneu, was released under $1,000 bond.

Struckman, represented by Attorney Clarence Shutter, did not testify at the hearing. He pleaded not guilty to both counts, but was fined a total of $103 and costs by Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr.

City police arrested Struckman Wednesday night after his car crashed into a tree on the wrong side of Hill Top Drive. Struckman fled the scene and was found a few minutes later hiding in thick underbrush about 300 yards away, they said.

Officers John G. Powers, James J. Condon, Carl J. Stouffer and W. P. Crabtree investingated.

Others to testify for the state were Robert Curry, of 704 Montgomery avenue; James Wilkins, of 415 Louisiana avenue, and Joseph Screen, of 407 Prince George street.

John H. Dom, of Wellersburg, Pa., arrested Sunday on the National highway by State Trooper H. F. Schultheis, forfeited bond amounting to $16.50 on charges of speeding and passing on a curve.

Annoyed Motorist Slugs Magistrate

Cumberlander Jailed Also Sued for $300

27-year-old South Cumberland man remained in the county jail last night on a charge of assault which grew out of an alleged attack upon Magistrate Thomas E. Stakem, of Midland.

The man, Eugene S. Borgman, of the 300-block of Springdale street, arraigned yesterday in Trial Magistrates court, asked a jury trial and was jailed in default of $500 bond. He is being held for trial at the October term of court.

A civil suit against Borgman for $300 damages has also been filed by Magistrate Stakem. Borgman reportedly knocked out a front tooth of Magistrate Stakem Wednesday night in his chambers.

Borgman was fined $1 by Magistrate Stakem for illegally parking on Main street. But instead of handing him the money, he reportedly threw the bill on the floor and, when Magistrate Stakem started to pick it up, attacked him.

Attorney Matthew J. Mullaney represents Borgman.

The civil suit hearing is scheduled for June 11.

Pioneer in Reverse Camps in LaVale

A pioneer in reverse, bound with ox and covered wagon from Pike's Peak to the New York fair, is camping in LaVale, night.

The strange outfit attracted much attention along the National highway, especially because of "San Dimas" the dog and Shanghai Red," the rooster, who travel perched on the ox's back.

Two goats trail along behind, and two kid goats ride in the wagon, which is a small-scale copy of the real thing.

The "pioneer," 52-year-old Orville Erving, of Pritchett, Col., has been under way since last Labor Day. He pays his way by selling photographs of his outfit—ten cents apiece or three for a quarter.

He will be in LaVale until Tuesday, getting the ox shod and selling pictures to week-end travelers.

Mystery Death Of Young Boy Being Probed

Victim's Mother Former Resident Of Cumberland

Funeral services were to be held today at Westminster, Md., for 13-year-old Norman Boyle, Jr., as authorities pushed their probe into his mysterious sudden death.

The lad, whose mother is a former Cumberland resident, died Thursday in a Baltimore hospital, where he was rushed Wednesday night after companions found him crying and incoherent, leaning against a tree near the Westminster high school.

The boy's clothing was torn and dirty when he was found, and a physician said there was a small bump on his head. He was revived after being taken home, but could not tell what happened.

Officers speculated that he may have fallen from a high wall in an alley near the school. His hat was found nearby. Surviving, besides his parents, are three sisters, Anne, Mary Carberry and Elizabeth Boyle.

Mrs. Boyle is the former Miss Ethel Franklin, of Cumberland.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Franklin, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Boyle, left yesterday to attend the funeral.

Red Cross Raises $1,000 to Date

War Relief Drive Continues Here

The first thousand dollars in the Allegany county war relief drive of the American Red Cross was reached yesterday it was announced by Harvey Weiss, treasurer of the executive committee for the county. A minimum of $7,000 is asked from Allegany county in a nation wide campaign to raise $20,000,000.

Collections from two theaters taken at the 9 o'clock showings Thursday and Friday amounted to $117.36, according to Mrs. H. B. Marley, office manager. Members of the Junior Volunteers will assist eight American Legionnaires tonight in collections at three theaters. Girls from local high schools are helping other evenings.

Contributions may be sent to the war relief headquarters at 45 N. Liberty street, Lichenstein's pharmacy or the Truitt drug store, Virginia avenue. Checks are payable to the War Relief Fund, American Red Cross.

More than 500 cardboard cartons have been placed throughout the county in business houses and schools for other donations.

Employes Ask Receiver For Auto Repair Firm

Five employes of the Cumberland Body Works, Inc., yesterday filed a petition in Circuit court asking appointment of a receiver for the automobile repair firm, claiming that it is "hopelessly insolvent."

The suit, docketed by Attorney Clarence Lippel, says that the company owes the petitioners back wages and that it is indebted, too, for materials "greatly in excess of its assets." The firm also owes taxes, and its assets are subject to liens, which are in default, it adds.

The employes and the amounts each claims were listed as follows: George Daoust, $74.53; Clifford St. Pierre, $12.22; Adolph St. Pierre, $95.02; Bergen Twigg, $24.94; and Geraldine Hoff, $20.55.

Associate Judge William A. Huster signed an order requiring the company to show cause by June 10 why a receiver should not be appointed.

Chamber Directors Favor Willkie for President

An interesting sidelight of a lobster dinner given for the directors of the chamber of commerce last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Smith at their home on the Windsor road, The Dingle, was a poll among guests on presidential possibilities, which showed Wendell Willkie as favored by the majority of the guests.

All but three of those present expressed the opinion that Willkie was outstanding as a presidential candidate by reason of his possession of brains and fortitude, although the most of those expressing their choice admitted that in all likelihood Willkie had little chance of being a nominee. Both Democrats and Republican members voted for Willkie.

Smith, better known as "Mike", said he had been planning a dinner for the directors but had been bantered into making it a lobster affair by two members of the board. He made good on the lobster, a lot having been brought to Cumberland especially for the affair.

Youth's Insurance Subject of Suit

Employer Says $5,000 Due Him

Circuit court judges were asked yesterday to order the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to recognize A. R. Douglass, South Cumberland meat dealer, as the beneficiary of a $2,500 policy on the life of David L. Deal, who was killed in an automobile crash Easter Sunday.

Under a double-indemnity clause the policy calls for payment of $5,000 in case of accidental death.

In an equity suit filed by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and William L. Wilson Jr., Douglass says that he had been paying the premiums on the policy and that Deal had executed a form naming him as beneficiary instead of his mother, Mrs. Isabelle Deal.

Youth Lived With Employer

Asking a court order to "reform" the policy, the bill of complaint charges that the company "has refused to recognize the change of beneficiary" although it has the endorsement duly signed by Deal.

For three years before his death, Deal lived at the Douglass home, 217 Springdale street, according to the suit, and began working for the Douglass wholesale meat firm "with the understanding that he later was to become a partner." Douglass treated Deal "as if he were his son," the petition adds.

Mother Named Beneficiary at First

In January, 1938, when Deal was 19, he took out the $2,500 policy, naming his mother as beneficiary and contracting to pay a $5.46 monthly premium, the suit goes on. In April, 1939, Deal defaulted payment, and the premium was paid by Douglass.

Again, in September, 1939, Deal was three months behind in payment of premiums. Reminded by Douglass of the importance of paying them, Deal said he was unable to keep them up, the suit states, and agreed that if Douglass would pay them and reinstate the policy, he would name him beneficiary in place of Mrs. Deal.

Change Too Late

A Metropolitan agent was consulted, and a change-of-beneficiary form issued and executed. The home office of the insurance company refused to honor the endorsement, however, on the ground that Deal was not 21, but declared that the change might take effect when he reached 21.

Deal marked his twenty-first birthday Jan. 5, 1940, and the insurance company was notified that the change of beneficiary could become effective. Deal delivered the policy to Douglass, but before the change could be made, he was killed March 24, when the car he occupied struck the guard-rail of a bridge near Martinsburg, W. Va., careened across the bridge and struck another automobile.

Since then, the company has refused to recognize the Douglass claim, the suit concludes, asking the court order to compel it.

Mrs. Deal, a resident of California, is also named defendant in the suit.

City To Install Traffic Light On Williams St.

Automatic Device To Guard Crossing At Maryland Avenue

Installation of an automatic traffic light at Maryland avenue and Williams street was approved yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the mayor and city council.

As explained by Police Commissioner James Orr, the light will be similar to the one at Dingle circle.

The light will show green for traffic on Williams street except when sufficient traffic on Maryland avenue passes over the controls, which will be located on Maryland avenue on each side of the intersection.

Cost of the light will be $700 if it is purchased outright, but it may be rented, Commissioner Orr said.

It had been hoped to install similar light on Greene street at the intersection of Johnson street, which leads onto the Blue bridge to Ridgeley, but council decided funds would not be available.

The council also decided to advertise for bids for construction of a new central fire station, although a definite decision to build will not be made until the bids have been studied.

An order retaining Dr. J. K. Rozum to take care of injured city employes and jail prisoners at a fee of $400 yearly was approved. An order calling for lump bids on all coal used by the city was also approved.

The payroll was approved.

Tom Richards Sent to Prison For One Year

Bids Judge Farewell After Sobbing On Witness Stand

Thomas P. Richards, former clerk to the board of county commissioners, was sentenced to a year in the House of Correction yesterday afternoon in Trial Magistrates court.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. imposed the sentence after refusing Richard's plea that he be allowed to go to a veterans hospital for "rehabilitation."

Richards was convicted of assaulting his wife.

Mrs. Richards Testifies

Mrs. Richards, controlling her emotions only with great difficulty, took the stand to tell how her husband beat her and choked her in their home on Gephart drive on April 15, after having threatened to kill her.

Her story was supplemented by testimony of Mrs. E. O. Fritch, a neighbor; Dr. and Mrs. A. N. Golladay, to whose home Mrs. Richards went after the incident; Dr. C. L. Owens; and the arresting officers.

Pleads Not Guilty

Richards pleaded not guilty, but did not challenge the testimony of his wife.

Richards had no attorney, but his sister, Mrs. Louis D. Young, rose to make an impromptu and impassioned plea for clemency for him.

At several points in his testimony, Richards broke down in sobs.

Yet when it was all over, in a gesture characteristic of the man who won so many friends during his many years as a public office holder, Richards thanked Magistrate Bruce and bade him goodbye.

Taken to County Jail

Richards was taken to the county jail to await his transfer to the House of Correction.

Richards was originally charged with assault with intent to kill, but he was given to understand that the charge would not be pressed if he left the county and stayed away.

He was brought to trial yesterday, however, when he was arrested here Tuesday allegedly in an intoxicated condition.

Charge Reduced

The charge was charged to simple assault yesterday. A simple assault charge can be disposed of in the magistrates court, while a charge of assault with intent to kill must go before the grand jury and Circuit court.

Attorney Charles Z. Heskett represented Mrs. Richards at the hearing. State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris was not present, but his office was represented by Terrence J. Boyle, county investigator.

IN NEW LEAGUE—James "Scotty" Stevenson, well-known amateur baseball pitcher and bus driver, tries to push his long legs under the desk he will occupy as new clerk to the board of Allegany county commissioners. See story below.—New Staff Photo.

'Scotty' Stevenson To Make Debut In 'Court House League' Tuesday

James "Scotty" Stevenson, an amateur baseball pitcher of note in these parts since 1933, will make his official debut in a new league next Tuesday, and it won't be tossing baseballs this time.

"Big Jim" is scheduled to take the oath of office as the new clerk to the board of Allegany county commissioners Tuesday, and thereafter he will become a member of the team of Green, Holmes and Stakem, which now holds first place in the Court House League.

Appointment Surprise

Stevenson, a native of Carlos, fell heir to the clerkship when R. Mason Hill resigned that post to become assistant clerk in charge of assessments. His appointment to the position of clerk came as a big surprise as even his closest friends were unaware that he was an applicant for the job.

For the past eight years, Stevenson has been a bus driver for the Potomac Edison Company and over that long stretch he has not had a single "responsible" accident. He holds a seven-year pin awarded him by the company for being a "no accident driver" and he hopes to obtain an eight-year pin before he resigns his job after driving a P. E. bus for the final time tomorrow.

"Scotty" first came into the baseball limelight in 1933 as ace hurler for the Cumberland Eagles, champions of the Interstate League. In 1934 and 1935 he enjoyed his best seasons as a member of the Potomac Edison nine. It was during those two seasons that he compiled a winning streak that still stands as a record for local amateur twirlers to shoot at. He racked up eighteen consecutive wins, twelve late in 1934 and six in a row in 1935 before he was halted by the Celanese A. A. in a game stopped by rain in the first half of the eighth inning with his team leading 6 to 3. When the score reverted to the seventh inning, Celanese was the winner by a 3 to 2 score.

Pitched Longest Game

In 1936, Stevenson, pitching for Frostburg, marked up ten consecutive wins in the George's Creek League. He also pitched in one of the longest games on record here when he lost a 19-inning thriller to Grant Town, W. Va., late in 1936, while working on the mound for the local American Legion semi-professional aggregation.

The big right-hander is now a member of the Hyndman Club, of the Bi-State League, and in the role of relief pitcher recently, he won his own game by knocking a two-bagger in the eighth inning to defeat Frostburg, 5 to 4.

"Scotty" is a son of George and Lillian Stevenson, of Carlos. His dad is employed in the filtration department of the Celanese Corporation of America plant. He has two married sisters, Mrs. Edith Hutcheson and Mrs. Elizabeth Winters, both of Carlos, and incidentally both the wives of well-known baseball pitchers, namely, Arch Hutcheson and Jim Winters.

Married, Two Children

The clerk is 32 years old, is married and has two children, George and Jimmy. His wife is the former Miss Laura Holler, of Cumberland. The Stevensons live at Ellerslie.

His uncle, James T. Stevenson, who now resides on Grand avenue, was elected to the Maryland House of Delegates for two terms. The former legislator's son, Bill, is also a pitcher of note, at present being a member of the Cumberland Colts, of the Bi-State League.

"I believe the only member of the family not pitching today is my grandfather, George Adams, 89, who is now living in Carlos," Stevenson laughingly remarked.

South Branch Floods Farms, Blocks Road

Main Highway Open Again; Corn Damaged

Flood waters of the South Branch of the Potomac rolled over many acres of rich farmland yesterday doing damage in many places to young crops, especially corn.

Low-lying fields the length of the valley were flooded, and highway traffic on U. S. 220 was cut off near Moorefield during the most of the day.

State Police reported that water was three-feet deep over the highway for a half mile stretch north of Moorefield. The road was closed from early morning until 3 p. m.

The South Fork flooded the same highway just south of the city limits.

The highway was closed for a short time, too, by more than a foot of water in the road in Petersburg Gap, between Moorefield and Petersburg.

Extent of the damage could not be checked yesterday, however, as the muddy waters still swirled through the fields.

Drunken Driving Case Appealed

Salesman Fined $103 After Hitting Tree

A 33-year-old vaccum cleaner salesman filed notice of an appeal to Circuit court yesterday in Trial Magistrate court after he was found guilty on charges of drunken and reckless driving.

Struckman, represented by Attorney Clarence Shutter, did not testify at the hearing. He pleaded not guilty to both counts, but was fined a total of $103 and costs by Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr.

City police arrested Struckman Wednesday night after his car crashed into a tree on the wrong side of Hill Top Drive. Struckman fled the scene and was found a few minutes later hiding in thick underbrush about 300 yards away, they said.

Annoyed Motorist Slugs Magistrate

Cumberlander Jailed Also Sued for $300

27-year-old South Cumberland man remained in the county jail last night on a charge of assault which grew out of an alleged attack upon Magistrate Thomas E. Stakem, of Midland.

The man, Eugene S. Borgman, of the 300-block of Springdale street, arraigned yesterday in Trial Magistrates court, asked a jury trial and was jailed in default of $500 bond. He is being held for trial at the October term of court.

A civil suit against Borgman for $300 damages has also been filed by Magistrate Stakem. Borgman reportedly knocked out a front tooth of Magistrate Stakem Wednesday night in his chambers.

Borgman was fined $1 by Magistrate Stakem for illegally parking on Main street. But instead of handing him the money, he reportedly threw the bill on the floor and, when Magistrate Stakem started to pick it up, attacked him.

The civil suit hearing is scheduled for June 11.

Pioneer in Reverse Camps in LaVale

A pioneer in reverse, bound with ox and covered wagon from Pike's Peak to the New York fair, is camping in LaVale, night.

The strange outfit attracted much attention along the National highway, especially because of "San Dimas" the dog and Shanghai Red," the rooster, who travel perched on the ox's back.

Two goats trail along behind, and two kid goats ride in the wagon, which is a small-scale copy of the real thing.

The "pioneer," 52-year-old Orville Erving, of Pritchett, Col., has been under way since last Labor Day. He pays his way by selling photographs of his outfit—ten cents apiece or three for a quarter.

He will be in LaVale until Tuesday, getting the ox shod and selling pictures to week-end travelers.

The boy's clothing was torn and dirty when he was found, and a physician said there was a small bump on his head. He was revived after being taken home, but could not tell what happened.

Officers speculated that he may have fallen from a high wall in an alley near the school. His hat was found nearby. Surviving, besides his parents, are three sisters, Anne, Mary Carberry and Elizabeth Boyle.

Employer Says $5,000 Due Him

Circuit court judges were asked yesterday to order the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to recognize A. R. Douglass, South Cumberland meat dealer, as the beneficiary of a $2,500 policy on the life of David L. Deal, who was killed in an automobile crash Easter Sunday.

Under a double-indemnity clause the policy calls for payment of $5,000 in case of accidental death.

In an equity suit filed by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and William L. Wilson Jr., Douglass says that he had been paying the premiums on the policy and that Deal had executed a form naming him as beneficiary instead of his mother, Mrs. Isabelle Deal.

Youth Lived With Employer

Asking a court order to "reform" the policy, the bill of complaint charges that the company "has refused to recognize the change of beneficiary" although it has the endorsement duly signed by Deal.

For three years before his death, Deal lived at the Douglass home, 217 Springdale street, according to the suit, and began working for the Douglass wholesale meat firm "with the understanding that he later was to become a partner." Douglass treated Deal "as if he were his son," the petition adds.

Mother Named Beneficiary at First

In January, 1938, when Deal was 19, he took out the $2,500 policy, naming his mother as beneficiary and contracting to pay a $5.46 monthly premium, the suit goes on. In April, 1939, Deal defaulted payment, and the premium was paid by Douglass.

Again, in Septmber, 1939, Deal was three months behind in payment of premiums. Reminded by Douglass of the importance of paying them, Deal said he was unable to keep them up, the suit states, and agreed that if Douglass would pay them and reinstate the policy, he would name him beneficiary in place of Mrs. Deal.

Change Too Late

A Metropolitan agent was consulted, and a change-of-beneficiary form issued and executed. The home office of the insurance company refused to honor the endorsement, however, on the ground that Deal was not 21, but declared that the change might take effect when he reached 21.

Deal marked his twenty-first birthday Jan. 5, 1940, and the insurance company was notified that the change of beneficiary could become effective. Deal delivered the policy to Douglass, but before the change could be made, he was killed March 24, when the car he occupied struck the guard-rail of a bridge near Martinsburg, W. Va., careened across the bridge and struck another automobile.

Since then, the company has refused to recognize the Douglass claim, the suit concludes, asking the court order to compel it.

Mrs. Deal, a resident of California, is also named defendant in the suit.

The three defendants, Thomas McDonald, John Holshey, and Hank Baldwin, all of South Cumberland, explained it was just a "friendly scuffle," and pleaded not guilty.

Melvin C. Keller, 19, also of South Cumberland, thought differently, however, charged them with assault, and testified that his trousers were taken off and his coat torn.

City To Install Traffic Light On Williams St.

Automatic Device To Guard Crossing At Maryland Avenue

Installation of an automatic traffic light at Maryland avenue and Williams street was approved yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the mayor and city council.

As explained by Police Commissioner James Orr, the light will be similar to the one at Dingle circle.

The light will show green for traffic on Williams street except when sufficient traffic on Maryland avenue passes over the controls, which will be located on Maryland avenue on each side of the intersection.

Cost of the light will be $700 if it is purchased outright, but it may be rented, Commissioner Orr said.

It had been hoped to install similar light on Greene street at the intersection of Johnson street, which leads onto the Blue bridge to Ridgeley, but council decided funds would not be available.

The council also decided to advertise for bids for construction of a new central fire station, although a definite decision to build will not be made until the bids have been studied.

An order retaining Dr. J. K. Rozum to take care of injured city employes and jail prisoners at a fee of $400 yearly was approved. An order calling for lump bids on all coal used by the city was also approved.

The payroll was approved.

McCrory Store Manager Wins Honor Citation For Community Service

H. W. Smith, secretary of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, proposed Mr. Myers for the award.

Mr. Myers served as chairman of the membership drive for the Chamber of Commerce last year. He also headed the merchant group solicitations for the 1939 Community Chest campaign.

He was on the board of directors of the Western Maryland Motor Club, active in the Duke Memorial Bible Class, headed the finance committee for St. Mark's Reformed church, and was a member of the church's Consistory.

He was affiliated with the American Legion, and served as Tail-twister for the Cumberland Lions.

Attorney Wilson Cleared Of Reckless Driving

Attorney Lewis M. Wilson, of 819 Mt. Royal avenue, was acquitted of a reckless driving charge yesterday in Trial Magistrates court.

The charge grew out of a minor collision at Maryland and Central avenues Wednesday night.

The other driver, Robert A. Park, of 229 Emily street, was found guilty of reckless driving, however, and fined $10 and costs.

Tom Richards Sent to Prison For One Year

Bids Judge Farewell After Sobbing On Witness Stand

Thomas P. Richards, former clerk to the board of county commissioners, was sentenced to a year in the House of Correction yesterday afternoon in Trial Magistrates court.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. imposed the sentence after refusing Richard's plea that he be allowed to go to a veterans hospital for "rehabilitation."

Richards was convicted of assaulting his wife.

Mrs. Richards Testifies

Mrs. Richards, controlling her emotions only with great difficulty, took the stand to tell how her husband beat her and choked her in their home on Gephart drive on April 15, after having threatened to kill her.

Her story was supplemented by testimony of Mrs. E. O. Fritch, a neighbor; Dr. and Mrs. A. N. Golladay, to whose home Mrs. Richards went after the incident; Dr. C. L. Owens; and the arresting officers.

Pleads Not Guilty

Richards pleaded not guilty, but did not challenge the testimony of his wife.

Richards had no attorney, but his sister, Mrs. Louis D. Young, rose to make an impromptu and impassioned plea for clemency for him.

At several points in his testimony, Richards broke down in sobs.

Yet when it was all over, in a gesture characteristic of the man who won so many friends during his many years as a public office holder, Richards thanked Magistrate Bruce and bade him goodbye.

Taken to County Jail

Richards was taken to the county jail to await his transfer to the House of Correction.

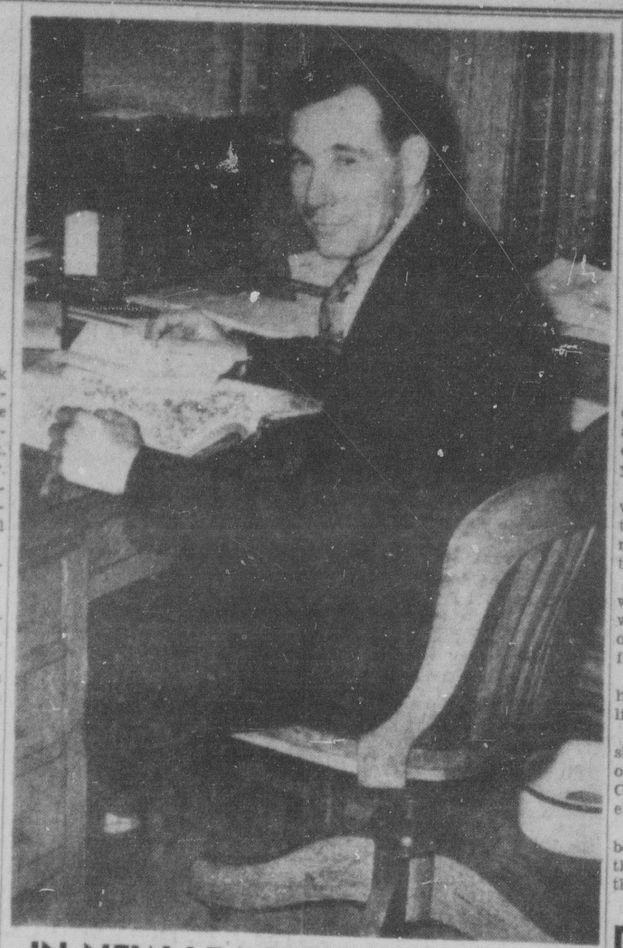
Richards was originally charged with assault with intent to kill, but he was given to understand that the charge would not be pressed if he left the county and stayed away.

He was brought to trial yesterday, however, when he was arrested here Tuesday allegedly in an intoxicated condition.

Charge Reduced

The charge was charged to simple assault yesterday. A simple assault charge can be disposed of in the magistrates court, while a charge of assault with intent to kill must go before the grand jjury and Circuit court.

Attorney Charles Z. Heskett represented Mrs. Richards at the hearing. State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris was not present, but his office was represented by Terrence J. Boyle, county investigator.



IN NEW LEAGUE—James "Scotty" Stevenson, well-known amateur baseball pitcher and bus driver, tries to push his long legs under the desk he will occupy as new clerk to the board of Allegany county commissioners. See story below.—New Staff Photo.

'Scotty' Stevenson To Make Debut In 'Court House League' Tuesday

James "Scotty" Stevenson, an amateur baseball pitcher of note in these parts since 1933, will make his official debut in a new league next Tuesday, and it won't be tossing baseballs this time.

"Big Jim" is scheduled to take the oath of office as the new clerk to the board of Allegany county commissioners Tuesday, and thereafter he will become a member of the team of Green, Holmes and Stakem, which now holds first place in the Court House League.

Appointment Surprise

Stevenson, a native of Carlos, fell heir to the clerkship when R. Mason Hill resigned that post to become assistant clerk in charge of assessments. His appointment to the position of clerk came as a big surprise as even his closest friends were unaware that he was an applicant for the job.

For the past eight years, Stevenson has been a bus driver for the Potomac Edison Company and over that long stretch he has not had a single "responsible" accident. He holds a seven-year pin awarded him by the company for being a "no accident driver" and he hopes to obtain an eight-year pin before he resigns his job after driving a P. E. bus for the final time tomorrow.

"Scotty" first came into the baseball limelight in 1933 as ace hurler for the Cumberland Eagles, champions of the Interstate League. In 1934 and 1935 he enjoyed his best seasons as a member of the Potomac Edison nine. It was during those two seasons that he compiled a winning streak that still stands as a record for local amateur twirlers to shoot at. He racked up eighteen consecutive wins, twelve late in 1934 and six in a row in 1935 before he was halted by the Celanese A. A. in a game stopped by rain in the first half of the eighth inning with his team leading 6 to 3. When the score reverted to the seventh inning, Celanese was the winner by a 3 to 2 score.

Pitched Longest Game

In 1936, Stevenson, pitching for Frostburg, marked up ten consecutive wins in the George's Creek League. He also pitched in one of the longest games on record here when he lost a 19-inning thriller to Grant Town, W. Va., late in 1936, while working on the mound for the local American Legion semi-professional aggregation.

The big right-hander is now a member of the Hyndman Club, of the Bi-State League, and in the role of relief pitcher recently, he won his own game by knocking a two-bagger in the eighth inning to defeat Frostburg, 5 to 4.

"Scotty" is a son of George and Lillian Stevenson, of Carlos. His dad is employed in the filtration department of the Celanese Corporation of America plant. He has two married sisters, Mrs. Edith Hutcheson and Mrs. Elizabeth Winters, both of Carlos, and incidentally both the wives of well-known baseball pitchers, namely, Arch Hutcheson and Jim Winters.

Married, Two Children

The clerk is 32 years old, is married and has two children, George and Jimmy. His wife is the former Miss Laura Holler, of Cumberland. The Stevensons live at Ellerslie.

His uncle, James T. Stevenson, who now resides on Grand avenue, was elected to the Maryland House of Delegates for two terms. The former legislator's son, Bill, is also a pitcher of note, at present being a member of the Cumberland Colts of the Bi-State League.

"I believe the only member of the family not pitching today is my grandfather, George Adams, 89, who is now living in Carlos," Stevenson laughingly remarked.

South Branch Floods Farms, Blocks Road

Main Highway Open Again; Corn Damaged

Flood waters of the South Branch of the Potomac rolled over many acres of rich farmland yesterday doing damage in many places to young crops, especially corn.

Low-lying fields the length of the valley were flooded, and highway traffic on U. S. 220 was cut off near Moorefield during the most of the day.

State Police reported that water was three-feet deep over the highway for a half mile stretch north of Moorefield. The road was closed from early morning until 3 p. m.

The South Fork flooded the same highway just south of the city limits.

The highway was closed for a short time, too, by more than a foot of water in the road in Petersburg Gap, between Moorefield and Petersburg.

Extent of the damage could not be checked yesterday, however, as the muddy waters still swirled through the fields.

Drunken Driving Case Appealed

Salesman Fined $103 After Hitting Tree

A 33-year-old vaccum cleaner salesman filed notice of an appeal to Circuit court yesterday in Trial Magistrate court after he was found guilty on charges of drunken and reckless driving.

Struckman, represented by Attorney Clarence Shutter, did not testify at the hearing. He pleaded not guilty to both counts, but was fined a total of $103 and costs by Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr.

City police arrested Struckman Wednesday night after his car crashed into a tree on the wrong side of Hill Top Drive. Struckman fled the scene and was found a few minutes later hiding in thick underbrush about 300 yards away, they said.

Annoyed Motorist Slugs Magistrate

Cumberlander Jailed Also Sued for $300

27-year-old South Cumberland man remained in the county jail last night on a charge of assault which grew out of an alleged attack upon Magistrate Thomas E. Stakem, of Midland.

The man, Eugene S. Borgman, of the 300-block of Springdale street, arraigned yesterday in Trial Magistrates court, asked a jury trial and was jailed in default of $500 bond. He is being held for trial at the October term of court.

A civil suit against Borgman for $300 damages has also been filed by Magistrate Stakem. Borgman reportedly knocked out a front tooth of Magistrate Stakem Wednesday night in his chambers.

Borgman was fined $1 by Magistrate Stakem for illegally parking on Main street. But instead of handing him the money, he reportedly threw the bill on the floor and, when Magistrate Stakem started to pick it up, attacked him.

Attorney Matthew J. Mullaney represents Borgman.

The civil suit hearing is scheduled for June 11.

Pioneer in Reverse Camps in LaVale

A pioneer in reverse, bound with ox and covered wagon from Pike's Peak to the New York fair, is camping in LaVale, night.

The strange outfit attracted much attention along the National highway, especially because of "San Dimas" the dog and Shanghai Red," the rooster, who travel perched on the ox's back.

Two goats trail along behind, and two kid goats ride in the wagon, which is a small-scale copy of the real thing.

The "pioneer," 52-year-old Orville Erving, of Pritchett, Col., has been under way since last Labor Day. He pays his way by selling photographs of his outfit—ten cents apiece or three for a quarter.

He will be in LaVale until Tuesday, getting the ox shod and selling pictures to week-end travelers.

Mystery Death Of Young Boy Being Probed

Victim's Mother Former Resident Of Cumberland

Funeral services were to be held today at Westminster, Md., for 13-year-old Norman Boyle, Jr., as authorities pushed their probe into his mysterious sudden death.

The lad, whose mother is a former Cumberland resident, died Thursday in a Baltimore hospital, where he was rushed Wednesday night after companions found him crying and incoherent, leaning against a tree near the Westminster high school.

The boy's clothing was torn and dirty when he was found, and a physician said there was a small bump on his head. He was revived after being taken home, but could not tell what happened.

Officers speculated that he may have fallen from a high wall in an alley near the school. His hat was found nearby. Surviving, besides his parents, are three sisters, Anne, Mary Carberry and Elizabeth Boyle.

Mrs. Boyle is the former Miss Ethel Franklin, of Cumberland.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Franklin, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Boyle, left yesterday to attend the funeral.

Employes Ask Receiver For Auto Repair Firm

Five employes of the Cumberland Body Works, Inc., yesterday filed a petition in Circuit court asking appointment of a receiver for the automobile repair firm, claiming that it is "hopelessly insolvent."

The suit, docketed by Attorney Clarence Lippel, says that the company owes the petitioners back wages and that it is indebted, too, for materials "greatly in excess of its assets." The firm also owes taxes, and its assets are subject to liens, which are in default, it adds.

The employes and the amounts each claims were listed as follows: George Daoust, $74.53; Clifford St. Pierre, $12.22; Adolph St. Pierre, $95.02; Bergen Twigg, $24.94; and Geraldine Hoff, $20.55.

Associate Judge William A. Huster signed an order requiring the company to show cause by June 10 why a receiver should not be appointed.

Chamber Directors Favor Willkie for President

An interesting sidelight of a lobster dinner given for the directors of the chamber of commerce last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Smith at their home on the Windsor road, The Dingle, was a poll among guests on presidential possibilities, which showed Wendell Willkie as favored by the majority of the guests.

All but three of those present expressed the opinion that Willkie was outstanding as a presidential candidate by reason of his possession of brains and fortitude, although the most of those expressing their choice admitted that in all likelihood Willkie had little chance of being a nominee. Both Democrats and Republican members voted for Willkie.

Smith, better known as "Mike", said he had been planning a dinner for the directors but had been bantered into making it a lobster affair by two members of the board. He made good on the lobster, a lot having been brought to Cumberland especially for the affair.

Youth's Insurance Subject of Suit

Employer Says $5,000 Due Him

Circuit court judges were asked yesterday to order the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to recognize A. R. Douglass, South Cumberland meat dealer, as the beneficiary of a $2,500 policy on the life of David L. Deal, who was killed in an automobile crash Easter Sunday.

Under a double-indemnity clause, the policy calls for payment of $5,000 in case of accidental death.

In an equity suit filed by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and William L. Wilson Jr., Douglass says that he had been paying the premiums on the policy and that Deal had executed a form naming him as beneficiary instead of his mother, Mrs. Isabelle Deal.

Youth Lived With Employer

Asking a court order to "reform" the policy, the bill of complaint charges that the company "has refused to recognize the change of beneficiary" although it has the endorsement duly signed by Deal.

For three years before his death, Deal lived at the Douglass home, 217 Springdale street, according to the suit, and began working for the Douglass wholesale meat firm "with the understanding that he later was to become a partner." Douglass treated Deal "as if he were his son," the petition adds.

Mother Named Beneficiary at First

In January, 1938, when Deal was 19, he took out the $2,500 policy, naming his mother as beneficiary and contracting to pay a $5.46 monthly premium, the suit goes on. In April, 1939, Deal defaulted payment, and the premium was paid by Douglass.

Again, in Septmber, 1939, Deal was three months behind in payment of premiums. Reminded by Douglass of the importance of paying them, Deal said he was unable to keep them up, the suit states, and agreed that if Douglass would pay them and reinstate the policy, he would name him beneficiary in place of Mrs. Deal.

Change Too Late

A Metropolitan agent was consulted, and a change-of-beneficiary form issued and executed. The home office of the insurance company refused to honor the endorsement, however, on the ground that Deal was not 21, but declared that the change might take effect when he reached 21.

Deal marked his twenty-first birthday Jan. 5, 1940, and the insurance company was notified that the change of beneficiary could become effective. Deal delivered the policy to Douglass, but before the change could be made, he was killed March 24, when the car he occupied struck the guard-rail of a bridge near Martinsburg, W. Va., careened across the bridge and struck another automobile.

Since then, the company has refused to recognize the Douglass claim, the suit concludes, asking the court order to compel it.

Mrs. Deal, a resident of California, is also named defendant in the suit.

City To Install Traffic Light On Williams St.

Automatic Device To Guard Crossing At Maryland Avenue

Installation of an automatic traffic light at Maryland avenue and Williams street was approved yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the mayor and city council.

As explained by Police Commissioner James Orr, the light will be similar to the one at Dingle circle.

The light will show green for traffic on Williams street except when sufficient traffic on Maryland avenue passes over the controls, which will be located on Maryland avenue on each side of the intersection.

Cost of the light will be $700 if it is purchased outright, but it may be rented, Commissioner Orr said.

It had been hoped to install similar light on Greene street at the intersection of Johnson street, which leads opto the Blue bridge to Ridgeley, but council decided funds would not be available.

The council also decided to advertise for bids for construction of a new central fire station, although a definite decision to build will not be made until the bids have been studied.

An order retaining Dr. J. K. Rozum to take care of injured city employes and jail prisoners at a fee of $400 yearly was approved. An order calling for lump bids on all coal used by the city was also approved.

The payroll was approved.
